ICING ON THE HOCKEY INVESTMENT CAKE

Facility enhances City's sports and entertainment offerings

Members of the media joined the Jacksonville Icemen and its investment group to celebrate the grand opening and ribbon cutting of the Community First Igloo, located at 3605 Phillips Highway, June 6.

Mayor Lenny Curry, alongside John Hirabayashi, president and CEO of Community First Credit Union, the facility's lead sponsor, and Andy Kaufmann of SZH Hockey LLC, the CEO and governor of the franchise operation, were on hand to share in the celebration.

"We have a passion not only for ice sports but also our hometown of Jacksonville," said Kaufmann. "We feel together we have achieved that dream."

Formerly known as the Jax Ice and Sports Complex, the facilities have undergone transformational change during the $23 million renovation. The new facility includes two ice surfaces on which to play hockey and 10 locker rooms, a 200-seat bar and grill, a rinkside café for coffee and other eats, a hockey pro shop and team store as well as an e-sports gaming space.

It was a night to remember for the Rotary Club of Jacksonville, the City's oldest club and Florida's first Rotary Club, as members and their guests attended the annual President's Party and Gavel Exchange, June 22, at the Ritz Theatre and Museum in LaVilla.

The ceremony marks the passing of the leadership from one club president to another. This year, Jim Agee passed the gavel to Marie Gnage, who will lead the club through the remainder of 2023, and pass her gavel in similar fashion in 2024.

YOU ASKED for it

Recently, The Resident has had many readers writing in to inquire about the legality of “snipe signs” — the signs they often see at highway exits, near the entrances to residential communities, at intersections or other places throughout the city. These signs are often affixed to utility poles, light posts or simply popping up from the ground on wires.

In our continued commitment to our readers, The Resident did some research to answer the most common questions about these snipe signs.

Snipe signs are common sights throughout Jacksonville, though they are considered illegal when placed on public property or in the public right-of-way.

Taking aim at snipe signs

BY MICHELE LEIVAS
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

They’re a common sight at the base of highway off-ramps or waiting to greet drivers as they leave residential communities — or even popping up at busy intersections.

Sticking up from the ground or affixed to or utility poles, they often boast promises to buy houses or cars, offer services to repair roofs, trim trees or cut lawns.

They’re snipe signs and yes, they’re illegal.

A snipe sign, according to the City of Jacksonville, is defined as “a sign placed on public property or within the public right-of-way. These signs are unlawful, considered abandoned property, and enforceable by immediate fine under local ordinance Chapter 741 [“Zero Tolerance on Litter”].”

The only exceptions to the law are “signs erected and maintained pursuant to the discharge of the governmental function of public health and safety,” — for example, the “vote here” signs directing citizens to polling sites or those, during the pandemic, directing residents to COVID-19 testing sites.

All other signage, if erected or affixed on public property or public right-of-way, is not permitted.

“Snipe signs are another component of obtrusive signage that really can be considered litter in some ways,” explained Scenic Jacksonville Executive Director Nancy Powell. “...Citizens should know that they are able to pick up a snipe sign that is illegal.”

Snipe sign complaints can be submitted to the City through various channels, including calling 630-CITY, the MyJax app and/or e-mail address or “or notifying an agency that can create a complaint on your behalf,” according to the City.

Enforcement of Chapter 741’s “zero-tolerance policy” when it comes to snipe signs includes fines and confiscation of the sign(s) in question. An immediate $50 fine is issued for the first five signs each on a single property by the same violator; additional signs beyond those first five receive a fine of $150 each.

The City explained:

“Uncontested citations and repeat offense violators progress the fine schedule from the first offense of $50-$150, to the second offense of $300, and the third offense of $500 per sign. Any unpaid citation may be issued a $500 judgement by the court, plus court fees. Contested signs may received a civil fine up to $500 plus court and attorneys’ fees. Any sign attached to a public utility pole, where the sign is above five feet from the ground, will start with the first offense at $350 per sign plus court fees.”

These fines are paid to the Duval County Tax Collector’s office and are then deposited into the litter trust fund account. These funds are distributed as follows (pursuant to ordinance section 111.786): “70% to [the Jacksonville Transit Authority] for bus stops and bus shelter maintenance; 30% to the enforcement and public awareness of the litter sign ordinance.”

In 2022, the City of Jacksonville collected $82,600 in litter sign fines; so far in 2023, it has collected $65,620.

Powell added that while citizens are able to remove illegal snipe signs and report them, the community shouldn’t rely on its community members to address this litter.

“We have the laws on the books, it’s a question of are we going to enforce those and make it a priority from a higher level perspective,” she said.

Political signs are permitted on private property so long as they are set back more than 10 feet from public right-of-way. According to city ordinances (Section 646.1314), “one temporary election sign for each candidate and each ballot issue may be displayed on a private lot.”

These signs must be removed within one week following “the election to which it pertains.”

Political signs or advertisement is not permitted on public property.

According to the city code, temporary directional real estate signs — “a temporary nonilluminated sign that functions to provide directions to residential real estate that is for sale, rent, or lease...” — is permitted on weekends from 6 p.m. Friday to 6 p.m. Sunday, though it must meet other criteria set out by the code pertaining to size, height and width and must follow specifications regarding authorized placement locations.

The code outlines these authorized locations to include:

1. “The non-paved portion of the public right of way of any City of Jacksonville roadway that is situated outside of any sidewalk, ditch or drainway;
2. Private property with the permission or consent of property owner or lawful occupant of the property; and
3. Within locally designated historic districts on the locations set forth in Subsections 656.1313(c)(1) and (2), provided that there shall be no more than three signs permitted for each residential property for sale, rent or lease within such districts.”

Signs on private property are permitted, though the building code requires permits are for all signs. Residents interested in learning more about the city’s rules and regulations regarding signs can do so by reading Part 13 (“Sign Regulations”) of Chapter 656 of the city’s Zoning Code.

Letter TO THE EDITOR

I was a bit confused in your recent publication stating that the dredging on Fishweir is nearing completion. Looking either direction from the bridge over the creek, it's obvious there has been no progress at all, the huge mudflats at low tide haven't been touched and there's been no dredging activity on either side, so how is this anywhere near completion, appears they haven't even begun!!

Fishweir Creek revisited

BY MICHELE LEIVAS
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) awarded the $8.2 million dredging contract for the Big Fishweir Creek "Aquatic Ecosystem Restoration Project" to Underwater Mechanix Services LLC last year after several years of study and planning — and several delays.

According to USACE Jacksonville Public Affairs Specialist David Ruderman, approximately 22,000 cubic yards of material have been dredged from the creek since work began. By completion, he said that number is expected to grow to 29,000.

Many residents have expressed concerns regarding the lack of activity pertaining to the large mud flats in the creek. The dredging that's taken place is within specified federal navigation channels, Ruderman explained. The USACE is unable to dredge beyond those channels, which means those large mud flats will remain untouched in this project.

"So the area outside of the channels themselves, whatever [residents] see today in the mud flats is what they will see tomorrow in the mud flats," he said. "I'm told it's a tidal area, so the tide may come in and cover some of it; the tide will go out and reveal pretty much what is visible today."

It is possible, however, for the City to revisit and dredge those mudflats in a separate project without the USACE's involvement, he said.

"The city could initiate dredging on its own in those stretches but the Corps wouldn't be a partner because those waters are not part of a federal project," he wrote in an e-mail.

Dredging was further limited by required buffers on either side of the Herschel Street bridge and initial plans to dredge all the way up to and beneath the bridge were "screened out" by concerns expressed by the Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT).

A 2019 public presentation on the project stated, "This area might be dredged under a future contract once FDOT replaces the bridge (several factors would have to be evaluated)."

Over the years, the project has been reconfigured in response to various issues and some features initially proposed were later eliminated from the project's scope.

"The final contract award was for a design that de-scoped vegetation planting and removal efforts; however, removal of excess sediment is expected to improve water quality in the ecosystem and support natural re-generation of bottom habitat," Ruderman added in a later e-mail.

Riverside resident Paul Poidomani shared his dismay at the lack of visible impact the project has made on the waterway.

"This thing is as full of mud as it was when we moved here 15 years ago," he said. "They haven't done a thing."

Poidomani is a boat owner and frequently visits Harps American Pub & Grill, overlooking the creek and he, like other residents who had inquired about the possibility with USACE, looked forward to a time when he might be able to reach the restaurant by boat.

While that will not be a possibility, given the buffers set in place near the Herschel Street Bridge, the depth of the widener — the "turning basin-like area at the confluence of Little and Big Fishweir Creek" — is now roughly five feet of mean low water, or the average depth at low tide. So long as they stay within the dredged federal navigational channels, smaller water crafts with less than a five-foot draft should be able to navigate the dredged segments without issue.

"The creek is more navigable and a lot of undesirable matter has been removed from the system, so it is an improvement," Ruderman said. "Perhaps not what folks have wished for, but I believe we will have delivered what was achievable."

Some residents have seen a positive change from the dredging. Stephanie Freeman, board chair of the St. Johns Riverkeeper, is a creek resident and stated she's already seen the return of some aquatic wildlife to the area.

"Over the past few months, there has been a significant change on Fishweir Creek. In addition to seeing a flurry of industrial boats in the creek, the waters now include a noticeable change in wildlife," she wrote in a statement. "Outside our backyard, we have seen a family of otters swimming by and on multiple occasions the bubbles and then heads of manatees. You can see the creek coming back to life."

When asked if the USACE would be open to organizing another public meeting or town hall to address residents' questions or issues regarding the work done at Fishweir Creek, Ruderman stated the USACE "would almost certainly participate," though the City would be the appropriate entity to initiate such a meeting.

"We understand that people have been anxious about this...and are obviously interested in what the final outcome is going to look like now that we're tracking towards the finish line," he said. "We hope that folks will appreciate the improvements to their navigational experiences and to the quality of the ecosystem itself, though it may not live up to some people's expectations."

"We understand that people have been anxious about this..."

The odor issue

An update on the Jacksonville Urban Odor Study

BY MICHELE LEIVAS
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

For several years, residents in the Murray Hill and surrounding urban neighborhoods — including San Marco, Springfield, Ortega and Brentwood — have been complaining of noxious odors in the early mornings, late evenings and during the weekends.

Last February, the City of Jacksonville installed sensors in Murray Hill and other locations and enlisted Envirosuite to monitor those sensors 24/7 in a year-long study that officially launched last April. The study, The Resident reported, was designed to “enable the City to determine how odors move throughout the area during the day and night, particularly in early morning, overnight and on weekends, when its EQD [Environmental Quality Division] staff is not physically available to respond and verify complaints.”

With the study concluded, residents are now simply waiting for the results of the study to be shared — and they may have to wait a little while longer.

According to the City, the nearly-200-page report is currently being reviewed and is expected to be presented to the Jacksonville Environmental Protection Board (JEPB) at its July meeting.

City of Jacksonville Director of Public Affairs Katie Wiles provided additional information on file with the EQD regarding the report: “Due to the size of the report (currently 188 pages), it has taken longer to review than anticipated. Once the report has been presented to the JEPB, it will be posted to the same webpage.”

The next steps regarding the odor study report will be coming from Mayor-elect Donna Deegan’s administration, she added.

The Jacksonville Urban Odor Study webpage can most easily be accessed by visiting the City of Jacksonville website (coj.net) and typing “Jacksonville Urban Odor Study” in the Search box in the upper right-hand corner of the City’s home page.

The odor study’s webpage provides updated information regarding the study. According to the overall monthly reports, the City received 158 complaints regarding the odor between January and March of this year. The overall monthly report for April has not been posted to the webpage.

The Resident will continue to report on this ongoing issue as new details emerge.

Nearly a million Floridians, many of them children, are at risk of losing Medicaid coverage over the next year

Medicaid and the Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP) have re-started their monthly checks for eligibility after pausing them for the past three years. This means hundreds of thousands of Floridians may lose their coverage from these programs over the next year. If this impacts you, a friend, or a family member, here’s what you need to know:

What’s happening?

During the federal Public Health Emergency for COVID-19, the Department of Children and Families put a hold on checking for eligibility and did not disenroll anyone from Medicaid or Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP).

In April 2023, the regular monthly process of verifying those who qualify for Medicaid or CHIP benefits restarted. Those who are no longer eligible will lose their benefits after their anniversary month.

What can individuals do if they are losing coverage through Medicaid or the Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP)?

Those losing coverage may be able to get financial help paying the monthly cost of an Affordable Care Act (ACA) health plan from the federal government. Individuals losing Medicaid or CHIP coverage can enroll in an ACA plan during a Special Enrollment Period (SEP) that runs through July 31, 2024. ACA plans cover preventive care, doctor and hospital visits, medications, and more. These plans may have different benefits than government plans, so it’s important to reach out for guidance.

Who can help?

For those who’d like to explore ACA plans, Florida Blue has specially trained agents who can help explain your options and help you find out if you qualify for financial help. You can find a local agent (FloridaBlue.com/find-an-agent), visit a local Florida Blue Center (FloridaBlue.com/center), or call 1-844-396-2512. If you do not enroll in an ACA Marketplace plan and lose Medicaid or CHIP coverage, other government programs that may be available are:

- Florida KidCare: Low-cost insurance for children up to age 18. Call 1-888-540-5437.
- Medically Needy Program: A program that allows Medicaid coverage after a monthly “share of costs” is met. Call 1-850-300-4323.

Community specialists from the Florida Blue Centers across the state are also available to help anyone in the community find programs and services, including food, housing, transportation, and financial assistance, medical care, children and youth services, and even military and veteran services. They can be reached at 1-877-352-5830.

Visit GetCoveredFlorida.com to learn more and get support and guidance, even if you don’t enroll in an ACA plan.

Florida Blue is an Independent Licensee of the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association.

Deegan administration announces executive team

BY MICHELE LEIVAS
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

Last month, then-Mayor-elect Donna Deegan announced the 11 members of her administration's executive team.

The appointments were announced at a press conference at City Hall, June 14, during which Deegan expressed excitement about her team as well as the prospect of working with the incoming city council representatives.

"Nobody gets into this to be a shrinking violet," she said. "You get into this to make a difference and I'm thrilled to have people on my team that are used to speaking out and are really productive members of this community. I think the same is true of our city council, so I think we're gonna work well together, I'm excited about it. I have great relationships with a lot of folks on the council, looking forward to building more."

Below are the 11 members of Deegan's executive team:

- Chief Administrative Officer: Karen Bowling
- Chief of Staff: Pat McCollough
- Chief Communications Officer: Phil Perry
- Director of Strategic Initiatives and Press Liaison: Melissa Ross

Mayor-elect Donna Deegan and the members of her administration's executive team, which she announced at City Hall on June 14.

- Chief of Public Safety: Lakesha Burton
- Interim Chief Financial Officer: Mike Weinstein
- Chief Financial Officer: Anna Brosche
- Chief Health Officer: Dr. Sunil Joshi
- Director of Diversity and Inclusion: Parvez Ahmed
- Director of Economic Development: Ed Randolph
- Executive Assistant: Erica Connor

Residents will recognize some of these names. Burton retired as assistant chief after serving with the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office for more than 20 years. She ran for Jacksonville sheriff in last year's election cycle for the position.

Ross is an award-winning TV and radio news anchor and reporter. WJCT News listeners will know her as host of the popular daily radio program "First Coast Connect."

Ross took to Twitter to share news of her appointment, writing, "Thrilled to announce I'll be joining Mayor-Elect @DonnaDeegan's administration next month as Director of Strategic Initiatives and Press Liaison. Thanks to @WJCTJax for 14 incredible years — and to all the listeners too. Also: the show must go on — and it will! — with a new host."

While her administration will officially take office on July 1, Deegan got to work before that. The City of Jacksonville's website shows meetings scheduled for the end of June for some of Deegan's committees, including the Military and Veterans, Constituency and Community Outreach, Arts, Culture and Entertainment, Public Safety, Economic Development and Infrastructure committees.

Deegan will be the 45th mayor of Jacksonville. She is the first woman to serve in the role.

New pool of funding created for environmental causes

Community Foundation to manage fund with oversight committee

BY MICHELE LEIVAS
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

The St. Johns Riverkeeper, in partnership with the Public Trust for Conservation, has launched a new fund to help keep the river and its waterways clean.

The Northeast Florida Environmental Conservation Fund is hosted by The Community Foundation of Northeast Florida and overseen by an oversight committee, whose members are appointed by The Community Foundation of Northeast Florida as well, explained St. Johns Riverkeeper Lisa Rinaman.

The fund was formalized last July.

The Northeast Florida Environmental Conservation Fund is a way to facilitate an initiative The St. Johns Riverkeeper, along with the Public Trust for Conservation, is working on using the Clean Water Act to clean up industrial storm water sites and “to target sites that are not in compliance for their discharge permits,” Rinaman explained.

When a settlement is reached with these entities, they are able to pay into this fund rather than pay fines to the government. In turn, these dollars are then applied to other environmental improvement projects.

“So it’s a way to use the Clean Water Act to clean up a site and also the potential dollars that would be used as fines, actually invest those into other environmental projects,” Rinaman added.

The St. Johns Riverkeeper spent several months working with the Public Trust for Conservation prior to launching the fund, following blueprints set forth by other waterkeeper organizations that had launched similar funds.

The St. Johns Riverkeeper is currently considering projects to fund through the new Northeast Florida Environmental Conservation Fund. Once these projects are identified, the grant-making process will begin.

“Some of the projects we’re looking at...are in the general areas of some of the industrial areas that we’re working to clean up and then that will help the downstream water bodies as well as communities have a cleaner river or creek,” Rinaman said.

She added, “It’s good for the environment, it’s good for the river and it’s good for the health of our communities here in Northeast Florida.”

Construction underway for Riverside skatepark

BY MICHELE LEIVAS
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

Site work is underway for the incoming skatepark beneath the Fuller Warren Bridge in Riverside.

This new skatepark was designed by California Skateparks. Construction began earlier this year and the site is currently being prepared to allow for underground utility work and drainage to begin.

The 1,000-foot-long skate plaza will be part of Artist Walk, a new park planned for the stretch of land between the I-95 on- and off-ramps at Park Street. According to the City of Jacksonville Parks, Recreation and Community Services Department, the skate plaza will feature “three rooms/spaces between the freeway pillars for various skill levels. The skate park entry area creates a ‘JAX’ stage that will front the synthetic turf lawn.”

Miki Vuckovich, director of strategic initiatives with California Skateparks, explained the space beneath the Fuller Warren Bridge and its restrictions helped formulate the final design for the park, which leans more toward a “street terrain” with its various elements versus the “bowl and transition” terrain.

“Because of the constraints that didn’t make a bowl a tenable solution there at that particular skatepark, the opportunity to really exploit the site’s characteristics to provide something that’s not just unique amongst Jacksonville skateparks, but really skateparks nationally,” he said.

Jacksonville has a rich history in the skateboard culture. It is home to Kona Skatepark, which, built in the 1970s, is known as the oldest skatepark in the world. According to its website, it holds the record of “longest-surviving, privately owned skatepark” in the “Guinness Book of World Records.”

Vuckovich referred to Kona Skatepark as the “granddaddy of all skateparks” and said it is the only remaining skatepark open from the boom of 1970s.

“There’s a lot of skateboarding history in Jacksonville, and I think, hopefully, this park will contribute to that,” he said.

The estimated cost for design, engineering and construction for Artist Walk, including the skatepark, is $8.8 million. Construction on the skatepark is expected to complete sometime late next year.

City Council strikes down Southbank self-storage PUD

BY MICHELE LEIVAS
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

It came down to the wire in more ways than one.

In a dramatic 9-to-9 vote at its final meeting, the city council voted down Ordinance 2023-0007.

Ordinance 2023-0007 is the Planned Unit Development (PUD) rezoning request for the proposed mixed-use development featuring self-storage at Hendricks Avenue and Prudential Drive. This vote brings to conclusion the controversial debate surrounding the PUD since it was filed in January, though discussions of the proposed Southbank self-storage facility reach back farther than that.

The council members voting in favor of the ordinance were Council Members Danny Becton, Aaron Bowman, Terrance Freeman, Sam Newby, Ju’Coby Pittman, Randy White, Kevin Carrico, Nick Howland and Reggie Gaffney, Jr.

Those voting against the bill were Council Members Michael Boylan, Matt Carlucci, LeAnna Cumber, Randy DeFoor, Al Ferraro, Joyce Morgan, Brenda Priestly Jackson, Ron Salem and Tyrona Clark-Murray.

Council Member Rory Diamond was excused from the meeting as he is currently fulfilling military obligations.

A COMPROMISE

At the June 27 meeting, attorney Steve Diebenow, representing the Atlanta-based developer wishing to build the mixed-use project — The Simpson Organization — discussed proposed changes to the PUD, which came about following negotiations with San Marco Preservation Society (SMPS) and a group of San Marco residents.

The changes, detailed in a floor amendment introduced by Council Member Kevin Carrico, included expanding the retail space from 16,000 to 19,127 square feet, the allotment of at least 36,609 square feet of residential space (equaling to a minimum of 20 residential units located on the floors above the self-storage units), an increase in parking spaces from 33 to 63 and 5,741 square feet of rooftop uses to include a bar and/or restaurant, which Diebenow likened to Riverside’s River & Post.

Diebenow said he considered this project “a reflection of the success of our downtown” and he stated all aspects of the PUD, in its original form and with the proposed changes, will be in support of the continued growth and success of the downtown area.

“The restaurants, the retail, the bar, the other residential uses as well as the self-storage — all of those things support the incredible success we’re having within about a mile of this site in activating our downtown,” he said.

He reminded the council that in its original form, the PUD gained approval from the Downtown Development Review Board (DDRB) in a 6-to-2 vote and the Land, Use and Zoning Committee in a 5-to-2 vote.

The Downtown Investment Authority (DIA) issued a second report on the PUD that, despite these proposed changes, continued to recommend denial.

In her presentation of the staff report, DIA Redevelopment Coordinator Susan Kelly read, “By providing residential uses and a rooftop bar and reducing the amount

“I feel like I’m in the Twilight Zone,” she said. “I understand you’re referencing a statute and I’d like that statute because I am confused: If our council rules say if there’s a tie vote that means that item is voted down, that is an action of this body. So walk me through how that is not construed a vote down or denial of this action under the statute rules if that’s the council rule. I’m confused.”

The council went to recess to allow time to research the appropriate move forward.

When the council returned to the dais, Freeman stated, “By our actions and pursuant to council rule 4.601, the tie vote will serve as a denial.”

Subsequently, the associated alleyway closure — Ordinance 2023-0213 — was unanimously voted down since, as Cumber

“By providing residential uses and a rooftop bar and reducing the amount of self-storage, the proposed changes...are a step in the right direction, however these changes do not go far enough towards realizing the need for an active mix of uses at this prominent corner of the Southbank District of downtown.”

of self-storage, the proposed changes...are a step in the right direction, however these changes do not go far enough towards realizing the need for an active mix of uses at this prominent corner of the Southbank District of downtown.”

Despite its proposed changes, the neighborhood remained unmoved in its united opposition to the PUD with citizens saying it was “too little too late” and “putting lipstick on a pig,” a sentiment later shared by Cumber.

A SURPRISE STATUTE

Some discussion followed the vote, during which Council President Terrance Freeman stated, “Our work is not done...”

Deputy General Counsel Mary Staffopoulos proceeded to cite a state statute regarding land use and zoning legislation that requires council to vote up or down on the matter and “with a 9-to-9 tie, that would not be registered as a denial or an approval.”

Under city council rules, however, a tie vote is considered a denial and Council Member Priestly Jackson expressed her confusion, shared by other council members, about how the vote wouldn’t stand as it is.

stated, “...There’s absolutely no need for it since the PUD failed.”

In a telephone interview following the meeting, Cumber stated, “I’m thrilled and it really is a testament to the neighborhood coming together in unison and in full force to protect the neighborhood.”

San Marco Preservation Society President Lauren Carlucci shared Cumber’s delight at the outcome, but expressed concern regarding the referenced statute as tie votes are a continuing possibility while Council Member Diamond is excused for military services.

“...We may see this state statute come up again and again if this ends up getting appealed,” she said.

Cumber explained the applicant is able to appeal the decision, however, she believed it would be a “heavy lift” for a court to overturn the city council’s action.

The Resident reached out to Diebenow for comment on the council’s ruling or any possibility of appeal as well as to the City for clarification regarding the state statute referenced during the council meeting, but did not receive a response by press time.

Carlucci hits the ground running in District 5

Joe Carlucci

BY JENNIFER JENSEN
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

Councilman for District 5 Joe Carlucci has already started working on a personal project to help improve the city and continue to move it forward. He has been working with Pastor Carl Patterson of St. Nicholas Bethel Baptist Church to help restore a historic cemetery. “The cemetery was originally dedicated to African American soldiers who fought in WWII,” Carlucci said. “It is a landlocked parcel and has very limited access, but we have begun to clear trees and debris and have made tremendous progress.”

The plan is to rededicate the ceremony once work is completed. He intends to seek out state-funding programs that might be available for the project. “This is truly becoming a great initiative with lots of community support and bipartisan political support,” he added.

He believes his experience, work ethic and desire to help the community are what got him elected. He served as president of the San Marco Merchants Association and was a voting member of a citizen oversight committee for Duval County Public Schools. He plans to bring that experience into several projects, including improving the city’s public parks and Southbank Riverwalk. He has already commissioned an audit of the parks’ system.

“This will show my staff and I exactly which parks need the most attention,” Carlucci said. “We are evaluating landscaping, hardscaping, safety items, playground equipment, etc. I want our parks to stand out for being family friendly and aesthetically inviting — not for being unsafe and rundown.”

Carlucci doesn’t see any issue in working across the aisle with members of the opposing party. “At the local level, everyone is generally working together to accomplish the same goal,” he said. Either way, Carlucci said he will handle any disagreements with patience. “Most issues can be resolved with intentional listening and clear communication,” he added.

Carlucci will also be working alongside his father, Matt Carlucci Sr., who is an at-large councilman and was re-elected unopposed. He is the third generation to serve on the city council. His grandfather, Joe Carlucci, served on the city council and state legislature.

Another project he would like to see to fruition is the splashpad at the Friendship Fountain, which was initiated by previous City Councilwoman Lori Boyer. The project has stalled and Carlucci hopes to get it back up and running.

Another area he plans to focus on is crime within the city. Carlucci sees crime as the No. 1 problem in the city. One way to address this problem is with mentorship programs and high school workforce certification programs, he said.

“Those are proven to work,” Carlucci said. “DCPS has had success in their first year with their Ready to Work program, which helps prepare our students for entering the workforce right out of high school.”

He also plans to support the sheriff in his initiatives for community policing and increased patrol officers.

His thoughts on the “Stadium of the Future?” Carlucci believes the Jacksonville Jaguars setting up community meetings around town to get feedback from citizens on the new plan is a good start. “I attended the huddle located in District 5 and was impressed by how thorough the design was,” Carlucci said. “Most people there were excited about the project and seemed eager to continue the process of negotiation.”

And what about the potential $1 billion the city and taxpayers would pay toward the new plan? “We own the stadium, so I believe we carry a certain level of responsibility to take care of one of our most valuable assets,” Carlucci said. “And we are very fortunate to have the Jaguars as our flagship tenant.”

He sees concessions on both sides but hopes the Jaguars will continue to use the stadium well into the future. “I cannot picture our city without them,” he added.

Carlucci plans to always be available for his constituents. He can be reached by phone at 904-859-5141 or by email at joecarlucci@coj.net.

“And we are very fortunate to have the Jaguars as our flagship tenant.”

Sixty years of teamwork

Associate growth and opportunity – a guiding principle for Weather Engineers, Inc.

James "Dan" Griffin, Jr. August 1979 working on a G500 Chiller

Indeed, the team of roughly 100 employees that is Weather Engineers — from the technicians handling calls to the office staff working behind the scenes — is so important to the company's leadership team, its wellbeing is addressed in the first of Weather Engineers' five guiding principles:

"Provide for the growth and long-term opportunity for all Weather Engineers associates."

To that end, Weather Engineers has launched Weather University, an on-site training facility at its Edison Avenue location that is available to all employees, regardless of their title or job description.

Weather Engineers, Inc. turned 60 this year. That's not just 60 years of serving the heating and air conditioning needs for residential and commercial clients in Northeast Florida, but 60 years of building and maintaining a family-owned company on a simple set of principles that value the hard work, dedication and loyalty of its employees as the backbone of such a successful company.

"Other companies that were family-owned are no longer family-owned businesses anymore," said Danny Towers, vice president of operations. "They're owned by investment firms. So, I think a part of that is important to talk about because people don't realize that we're a legit family business that has been here since 1963, and there's generations of family here. I also think it's important to highlight how important our employees are and how they're a really big part of why we're successful."

Employees installing units 2000

Founder James "Griff" Griffin, Sr. building the try-out training program in 1985

"We're bringing the next generation into the HVAC business and we're training them," Towers said. "We're also training our current employees to be the best, regardless of if they answer the phone or if they work in the field."

Additionally, Weather Engineers employees have access to an apprenticeship program available through the Northeast Florida Builders Association's (NEFBA) HVAC program.

With roughly one-third of its employees being part of the company for more than two decades, it's evident that the efforts President Dan Griffin and his family have made to make Weather Engineers truly a family in its own right have paid off.

"I think that the locally owned, family-operated business is at a distinct advantage these days," said Griffin.

He feels strongly about values that are the foundation of a company: Without them, there is a lack of hands-on management and knowledge of the inside of a company; it's nearly impossible [for corporate purchasers; takeovers] to establish a company culture that will be successful and sustainable.

Being a local, family-owned company, however, is not synonymous with a smaller radius of service. With Weather Engineers, it's quite the opposite. The company's service areas range from areas of Southeast Georgia across a wide radius of Northeast Florida, from Yulee to Ponte Vedra Beach to St. Augustine. And while it has remained in the Griffin family these 60 years, Weather Engineers has continued to expand and acquire other companies.

"We've merged seven other like-minded HVAC companies over the years," said Finance Manager Kayla Yeager, who is also Griffin's daughter.

Most recently, in August 2021, Weather Engineers acquired A-Plus Air Conditioning and Refrigeration in Gainesville, FL.

With each acquisition and each expansion comes the same guiding principles and commitment to excellence, be it the company environment or the customer service provided to each and every client.

James "Dan" Griffin, Jr. and Kayla Yeager

It's that customer service that is one of the things Towers is most proud of as he looks back on the history of Weather Engineers.

"We really strive to have the best customer service," he said. "If you need to talk to someone on the phone, you can call here and you can talk to someone. It's not automated. We're not run by a corporate company in another part of the country like some HVAC companies are. Everyone lives here, they all answer the phone here."

Jacksonville Historical Society unveils Bicentennial Bell

David Auchter, chairman of the board of the Jacksonville Historical Society, and Aaron Gibson-Evans, Bicentennial Bell chair and fifth-generation Jacksonville resident, unveiled the Jacksonville Bicentennial Bell for a celebratory crowd at the Jacksonville Main Library on June 7. Gibson-Evans had the honor of being the first to ring the bell.

The bronze, 225-pound bell will be on display in the Pajcic Promenade of the main library until a permanent site is secured. One side is etched with the Bicentennial logo and the other has the seal of Jacksonville. The bell was manufactured by Verdin, a Cincinnati-based company who restored the 1901 Greenleaf and Crosby clock at Laura and Adams Street after it was struck by a car. The idea for the bell was conceived by Jacksonville Historical Society Chief of Staff Kate Hallock to contribute to the preservation of Jacksonville's rich legacy.

Jacksonville turned 200 in June 2022. Donations for permanent inscriptions on the monument for individuals or families and businesses are still being accepted.

Boutique opens doors, specializes in paper flower artistry

Chase Zimmerman

For Chase Zimmerman, experimenting and playing with objects and crafting with tissue and construction paper, metals and other bits of leftover materials has always been a hobby. It's one that she's now taking to another level by opening a retail and gathering spot in San Marco, which was marked by a friends and family gathering, June 3.

Her latest venture, Chasing Paper — inspired by flora...made by hand, is a boutique full of unique and colorful art pieces showcased in an interior that airs on the side of Palm Beach, with its bright, colorful tones of oranges and pinks, which helps the art feel rich and vivid in a gallery-like setting. The space is full of paper creations hanging as wall art, standing as statues or as bouquets in vases full of flowers twirled around metal rods and other unique objects to showcase her whimsical 'one of a kind' pieces made by hand.

Modernizing Monovision

Donald Downer, M.D., cornea surgeon at Clay Eye Physicians & Surgeons, is the first physician in North Florida to perform a successful IC-8 Aphera Lens Implant. The IC-8 lens treats monovision, where one eye is used for distance vision and the other for near vision. With this lens, the near eye can now see both near and far distances.

"I'm always excited to be on the cutting edge of ophthalmology advancements for cataract surgery, and the Aphera IC-8 IOL is the first of its kind," said Dr. Downer. "As the first physician in North Florida to use the IC-8 Intraocular Lens for cataract surgery, I liken this lens to a camera. With the Aphera IOL, light is naturally focused as it enters the eye and seamlessly expands patients range of vision, so they can see objects, people and signage from varying distances."

Patients who previously could not tolerate monovision due to changes in their distance vision can now benefit from this type of vision correction.

Clay Eye Physicians & Surgeons currently has offices in Orange Park, Fleming Island, Mandarin, Riverside and Middleburg.

Thomas Tran took over management of River Nails Spa last April.

River Nails Spa has been part of the San Marco community for nearly 20 years, but it has a fresh new look and big plans with its new manager, Thomas Tran.

Tran took over management of the nail salon last April and immediately moved forward with renovations. Fifteen days later, the salon — tucked away in the Winn-Dixie shopping center on University Boulevard — welcomed customers new and old to see the changes Tran had made.

The most notable changes center around the spa chairs toward the back of the space: They are nestled between a custom-made koi and goldfish tank that provide not only a unique visual ambiance but provide the soothing sound of water that, along with the updated lighting, create a full sensory, relaxing experience clients can enjoy while getting their nails done.

This is the second nail salon Tran has managed, although he has worked in the industry since 1997. Before taking over River Nails Spa, he worked in the Brooklyn area and lived on the west side. Now, as a San Marco business owner and resident, he said he does what he can to support fellow local businesses.

"I like to be a part of this community," he said. "That's why I do my best to work together with the local business. So anybody from a local business come, they let me know they're a local business, I'll give them a discount. That's how we help the local business. We have to work together."

River Nails Spa's services include manicures, pedicures and dipping (including powder and acrylics) as well as waxing services. Tran hopes one day to move into a larger space so he can grow his team and expand their services, but for now, his primary focus is on building his clientele and he loves getting to know the people who sit at his table.

River Nails Spa is located at 1540 University Blvd West. Open Monday thru Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. by appointment with walk-ins welcome.

Terry Vereen Plumbing celebrates 40 years

Terry Vereen

Whether it's a major plumbing project or a quick fix, Terry Vereen Plumbing has been there for clients in Jacksonville and Duval County for four decades now.

Based in Jacksonville and launched in 1983, this family company is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year by continuing to provide top-of-the-line service to its residential and commercial clients, with services specializing in repiping and remodeling, water heaters, slab leaks, sewer and drain services, cast iron replacement and insurance claims. Additionally, owner Terry Vereen and his staff also understand the plumbing emergencies can and do happen outside normal office hours and provide emergency services 24/7.

Vereen said reaching this milestone for his company could not have been accomplished without his team of employees and the loyal customers that have remained with him throughout the years.

"There's been a lot of help getting here," he said. "All my great employees, my great customers. I still have some of the same customers I started out with 40 years ago, as well as their children and their grandchildren. They've been good to me, they've been dedicated."

A quick visit to the company website will also reveal "Tips from Terry" — a page dedicated to providing "basic plumbing information every homeowner should know," from common reasons for a slow drain or a sudden drop in water pressure to easy, pro-active steps homeowners can take to save both water and money.

Terry Vereen Plumbing is located at 2690 Rosselle Street and can be reached at (904) 569-9143. Clients can also submit a request for service and/or information through a contact form at www.terryvereenplumbing.com.

Thomas joins PACE Center for girls

Genelle Thomas

Pace Center for Girls, a nationally-recognized model that provides education, counseling, training and advocacy for girls and young women, announced the appointment of Genelle Thomas as Executive Director of Pace Clay.

"Genelle is a dynamic, collaborative leader who has the vision and experience to advance our mission and lead the center in Clay County," said Mary Marx, Pace President and CEO. "I look forward to working alongside Genelle as she engages the Clay community in Pace's work and reaches more girls across Northeast Florida."

Thomas brings over 20 years of nonprofit and youth development leadership to Pace Clay. She has a proven record of community impact and most recently served as the Director of National Initiatives at Partners for Youth with Disabilities. During her tenure, she was instrumental in increasing sustainable fiscal support, launching new programming, and building coalitions. In this role, she co-founded the National Disability Mentoring Coalition and co-chaired the Mentoring and Leadership Task Force through UNICEF's Global Partnership on Children with Disabilities.

A Reel Success

First place winners Steven Keith and Daniel Robertson

Second place winners Randall Alvarez and Jocham Williams

Third place winners Chris Cercy and Eric Roberts

More than 940 anglers and 470 boats hit the water in Palatka the third week of May during the 34th annual Wolfson Children's Hospital Bass Tournament, one of the largest bass fishing tournaments in Florida. The tournament raised $436,000 for Wolfson Children's C. Herman and Mary Virginia Terry Heart Institute. This year's tally brings the total to more than $6 million raised by the tournament since its inception in 1989.

The three-day event featured different competitions each day with the main tournament on Saturday, May 20. Daniel Robertson and Steven Keith of High Springs won first place overall with a five-fish aggregate weight of 25.11 lbs. Second place went to Randall Alvarez of Starke and Jocham Williams of Macclenny, with a total weight of 24.42 lbs. Chris Cercy of Middleburg and Jacksonville's Eric Roberts took home third place with 21.75 lbs.

Syler Prince and Rileigh Stout of Palatka won the May 18 Lads and Lasses Tournament with a five-fish aggregate weight of 23.95 lbs. followed by Ronnie Council and Reta Szlosek of Palatka with 21.83 lbs. Charles and Kelly Moody of Green Cove Springs placed third with 19.49 lbs.

Danny Inabnett and Randy Sievert of DeLeon took home first place in the May 19 VIP & Friends Tournament with a total weight of 17.73 lbs. Derek Daniels of Macclenny and Michael Johnson of Raiford followed with 17.18 lbs., and Jacksonville's Eric Lewis and Kevin Flanigan came in third with 16.34 lbs.

Winners took home more than $48,000 in cash prizes.

The 35th annual Wolfson Children's Hospital Bass Tournament is scheduled to take place May 16-18, 2024.

A Blues change-up

The 10th Annual Blues, Brews, Bourbon & BBQ changes venues

The 10th annual Blues, Brews, Bourbon & BBQ event returns in 2023 on Thursday, September 7, this time at Bowing Oaks in Jacksonville, as the Florida Theatre will be under renovation during the event. Bowing Oaks has been a corporate partner of the historic, nonprofit Florida Theatre since 2019.

"We have always been supportive of the Florida Theatre and are glad to have this opportunity to host Blues, Brews, Bourbon & BBQ on September 7th. I think Bowing Oaks will lend itself perfectly to it. It is an extraordinary event and we are looking forward to it," said Jim Efstathion, owner of Bowing Oaks. "We are all about good things and good people. The Florida Theatre represents both."

"Blues, Brews, Bourbon & BBQ...will still feature a merger of the culinary, brewing and performing arts that have been so popular at this event. Live music, good food and drink, and good company are a hard combination to resist," said Numa Saisselin, president of the Florida Theatre.

Attendees of this annual event can expect an electrifying evening of live blues music from the Snacks Blues Band and Henry Jones, unlimited local BBQ, craft beer and a curated bourbon selection. All proceeds support the Florida Theatre, which has received a total of $296,697 since the 2013 start of Blues, Brews, Bourbon & BBQ.

AT

Live a life of luxury in the heart of San Marco Lifestyle offers a unique, vibrant and sophisticated quality of life

Its own little neighborhood within San Marco. That's how The Hendricks at San Marco wants its residents to feel when they step foot on property and begin living life to the fullest. The luxury apartment complex located in the heart of San Marco at 1520 Alford Place opened June 12 and is turning heads due to its amenities and desirable location adjacent to San Marco Square.

The complex is walkable to the historic town center, which serves as a hub for shopping, dining, and entertainment, not to mention, it plays host to many cultural events and festivities year-round. The beauty of living at The Hendricks is the proximity to anything a resident might need or want, it is right outside your front door.

Within minutes, you are in a historic, eclectic area where a bookstore, coffee shops, dozens of restaurants and your Publix grocery store is just a hop, skip and a jump away. If you're seeking a workout and enjoy a healthy lifestyle, stop into Orange Theory Fitness, Definition Fitness on the Square, or discover San Marco Strong a short walk down San Marco Boulevard. Better yet, jog, walk or bike your way to the Southbank Riverwalk, which is less than half a mile away along the banks of the St. Johns River.

The amenities are endless, as the new construction and adjacent growth in the area has brought the so many great attractions to enhance one of the most iconic neighborhoods the City has to offer. There are several fine dining restaurants nearby to include Matthew's and Rue St. Marc, Taverna, Taverna Oceana, Bar Molino and other unique eats at Tex Mex favorite Hightide Burrito and the Aztec-inspired eats and micro brews at Tepeyolot Cerveceria. Craving something sweet? Check out delectable cookies from Crumbl Cookies or Dreamette for a cone or sundae - from breakfast, to lunch, dinner, and dessert - it's all within a few blocks of your residence.

The Hendricks at San Marco is luxury living. The goal is to spoil residents and deliver on a unique living arrangement, you can't get any closer to a life well lived. The development is brand new, and everything is top of the line. The complex has a variety of different layouts, eight in total, for residents to choose from. The units range from studio apartments to two-bedroom apartments. The smallest unit is 614 square feet in a studio apartment and the largest two-bedroom apartment is 1,057 square feet. With several different layouts to choose from, residents can choose a larger living room or a larger bedroom, and if a balcony is top of your list, there are several layouts that offer outdoor space. The leasing office offers 7- to 12-month lease terms and prices vary based on the length of the lease and size of the unit.

Due to the sophistication and thoughtful build-out technology for work-life balance, all units are able to tap into high-speed wi-fi. This quality of signal pushes high speeds throughout the entire community, so busy residents on PC's, tablets or mobile devices are always connected no matter where they are in the building. Each unit also has smart home features, such as smart lock and a smart thermostat. There are also washers and dryers in every unit, which is a convenience not to be overlooked.

The apartment community also features top of the line amenities built around a centralized courtyard where the amenities truly separate The Hendricks from the rest. A resort style pool, grilling areas, outdoor fire pit and seating area, outdoor yoga and fitness lawn, fully equipped fitness center and coworking spaces make for convenience at home. The clubhouse has a coffee station that is available daily for residents who can then sip morning coffee while enjoying the library and reading areas. Better yet, you can plan dinner with your friends or spend time sipping and relaxing in the wine room on the property. The large clubhouse also has a fully equipped kitchen, bar, and seating areas where residents can work, read and socialize all in one space.

The Hendricks is also welcoming when it comes to your pet, the community built out a dog park and Dog Spa Room to be sure you can care for your furry family members. All pets are required to complete the pet screening profile, which requires vaccination records, medical records, yet there are no breed restrictions currently at The Hendricks.

Those interested in the property can visit the location in person or go online to begin browsing the galleries of images and property details. A plethora of photos of the property, amenities and layouts are available for people to view as well as an application, which is also discoverable online. A manager and leasing agent are available by phone or will greet you with a smile on the property to walk through the entire process, step by step, or book a tour to truly get inspired by what's possible when you live life at The Hendricks.

Now that's girl power

The Women's Giving Alliance (WGA), an initiative of The Community Foundation for Northeast Florida, announced $561,600 in grants to 14 Northeast Florida nonprofit organizations to a crowd of nearly 200 WGA members at its annual Member Forum. This year's awards recognized the work being done to improve the lives of women and girls in the area, specifically for workforce support and client basic needs.

"Our WGA grantees' commitment to women and girls in our region is unwavering and our members share that same passion and commitment to ensuring no woman or girl is left behind," said Sheila Collier, president of WGA.

The following received one-year grants for 2023-24:

- Barnabas Center: $50,000 (Nassau)
- Beaches Emergency Assistance Ministry (BEAM): $40,000 (Duval and St. Johns)
- Betty Griffin Center: $50,000 (St. Johns)
- Delta Research and Educational Foundation: $10,000 (Duval)
- Family Promise of Jacksonville: $50,000 (Duval)
- Feeding Northeast Florida: $50,000 (All Northeast Florida counties)
- The LJD Jewish Family & Community Services: $50,000 (Duval)
- Literacy Alliance of Northeast Florida: $5,000 (All Northeast Florida counties)
- Micah's Place: $30,000 (Nassau)
- Northeast Florida Women Veterans: $27,100 (Duval)
- Rebuilding Ex-offenders Successfully Through Opportunities Rehabilitation and Education (R.E.S.T.O.R.E.) $50,000 (Duval)
- Rethreaded: $50,000 (Duval)
- Volunteers in Medicine Jacksonville: $50,000 (Duval)
- WeCareJax: $49,500 (Duval)

Over the past 21 years, WGA has awarded more than $8.9 million to 70 nonprofits, serving at least 30,000 women and girls across Baker, Clay, Duval, Nassau, Putnam and St. Johns counties.

The Seilhymer Solution

Lucas Seilhymer has been appointed the new executive director of Mission House, following a national search to replace Carina Saladino, who left the organization last year.

"It's an honor to have been selected to serve the men and women who are affected by homelessness in the Jacksonville Beaches community," said Seilhymer. "I'm thrilled to be relocating to the area, and I'm already humbled by the outpouring of community support for Mission House."

Seilhymer, who is moving from Danville, Illinois, will assume the role on July 17, 2023. He was previously CEO of the nonprofit Project Success of Vermilion County. Now, with Mission House, he will help the day facility end homelessness in Northeast Florida by providing health care and supportive services, including food, clothing and case management.

"The board is thrilled to welcome Lucas to Mission House. We're confident that with his previous experience and immense skill set, he will guide the organization to the next level, helping put more people on the path to independence in our community," said Billy Wagner, board chair.

All Saints Hosting Vintage Finds and Crafts Festival

Looking for a special gift or treasure this summer? A neighborhood church may be just a place to shop.

All Saints Episcopal Church at 4171 Hendricks Avenue is hosting a Vintage Finds and Crafts Festival July 22 to raise funds for its youth program. Open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the church parish hall, the local market will include an array of items for purchase. There will be dedicated areas for individual home baked goods, books and games, jewelry, art, small furniture, antiques, craft items, baskets and vintage apparel. Members of the All Saints Quilt Ministry are selling handmade quilts as well.

A grilled lunch and drinks prepared by the Men of All Saints also will be available for purchase during the festival.

Don't forget to bring cash! All purchases, including food and finds, will be cash transactions only according to festival organizers.

While visiting the festival, guests are invited to enjoy All Saints Episcopal Church's beautiful Hendricks Avenue campus. Established in the San Marco community in 1885, the church was moved to its current location at 4171 Hendricks Avenue in 1955. The brick church was dedicated in 1965.

Come and enjoy the festival and the beauty of the All Saints' peaceful neighborhood setting.

THE LEGACY OF KINDNESS

Established as “lovers of kindness”, Congregation Ahavath Chesed showed the resiliency of such a founding principle as they celebrated a remarkable 140 years in Jacksonville. Affectionately known simply as The Temple, the group gathered for an anniversary gala on May 20, 2023, at 6 p.m.

Gilded in gold and blue, the celebration centered on The Temple’s tenets of righteousness, mercy and love, and was filled with music, speeches, dinner and a signature wall featuring the congregation’s historical timeline.

The promise of The Temple’s 140 years of growth is best summarized by a statement from its 1882 founder, Rabbi Max Moses, “Though thy beginning be small, thy end shall greatly increase. The future shall show the rich, golden harvest of the beginning you have so bravely made.”

PRESIDENT'S PARTY A ROARING GOOD TIME FOR ROTARIANS

Ladies in attendance donned their best roaring 20's attire.

During a recent gavel exchange, history was written once again as Marie Gnage took the helm to represent the Rotary Club of Jacksonville as its fearless leader for the 2023-24 Rotary Year. Rotarians in attendance enjoyed a Roaring 20's theme, complete with food, libations and entertaining Jazz by the John Lumpkin Trio and a special guest appearance by two-time Grammy-winning singer Kendra Foster, Gnage's daughter.

For Gnage, this historic moment was special for her as she humbly accepted her plaque and made mention that she was honored to reach this milestone, while celebrating the legacy of other African American leaders in an appropriate place for the occasion. She thanked her husband, her youngest sister, her daughter and others and recognized those that have laid a historic foundation where the "Harlem of the South" was captured in essence via the backdrop of history and achievements showcased at the Ritz Theatre and Museum.

COMMITTEE TALKS GALA, FUNDRAISING FOR DESC

Leaders and committee members that support poverty fighting fundraiser, DESC Defenders: Into the Future, gathered at Beau Rivage, June 6, to talk about the upcoming event benefitting the Downtown Ecumenical Services Council.

The evening featured insightful talks by event chair, Alex Benavides, who has spearheaded the fundraising event for two years in a row. Benavides was joined by David Clark, executive director, longtime board member, Julie Handley, and Board Chair Pamela Prier; remarks were also shared by honorary chairs for the 2023 season, Randy and Allison DeFoor.

"We want the event to be fun and exciting, but we also want our guests to learn more about what services people in poverty need and why they need them," said Benavides. "Tenikka Hughes, our emcee, will lead the audience through immersive activities that will keep the audience engaged."

The event is the culmination of the 40th anniversary celebration for DESC which started last fall. That event raised more than $300,000 continuing a record-breaking trend over the last few years. Sponsorships, tickets and donations can be made at the event website: www.descdefenders.com.

Serendipity in stained glass

A charitable endeavor got a heavenly helping of serendipity when the renovation of a historic home on King Street led a beautiful work of art back into the hands of its creator.

Walter and Sally Suslak first purchased their current home in 2005. Built in 1927, the house was once a convent for sisters within the Ascension St. Vincent's system in Jacksonville. It was originally located on King Street, where Ascension St. Vincent's River House is located today, but was at risk for demolition. So, to preserve its architectural history, the Suslaks had it moved by barge to its permanent spot at 1888 Powell Place.

During renovations, the Sulsaks wondered what to do with the handmade stained-glass windows that once separated the convent chapel and enclosed river room. They replaced the windows with French doors, but Walter Suslak placed the panels in cardboard boxes and held onto them. After some time, he decided to reach out to Ascension St. Vincent's Foundation about the panels.

"I asked if they might have any use for some stained glass, since it was once in this historic building where Sisters had once lived," said Walter Suslak. He offered to pay for repairs to the glass if the Foundation could find it a new home.

The Foundation decided the panels would add some history to the newest hospital in St. Johns County and accepted Suslak's offer. A staff member, unsuccessful in her attempts to find someone to repair the stained glass, called Sister Diane Couture of the Sisters of St. Joseph and St. Joseph Ministries Architectural Stained Glass, who asked to see photos in order to assess the broken pieces.

"I'm looking at these photos to evaluate the damage, and I'm thinking, 'Wait a minute, that's my window!'" said Sister Couture.

The Suslaks with their famed, stained-glass window

"I sent the Foundation a note," she continued. "I told them I was sure that I could repair the piece, but that they needed to ask the window's owners if the pane came from the King Street convent house."

Surprised and intrigued, the staff member let Sister Couture know that the piece did indeed come from that building.

"I told her, I can absolutely fix it, because I'm the one who made it!" said Sister Couture.

Sister Couture repaired the piece, which is now displayed in the St. Johns County hospital. The Suslaks recently invited Sister Couture to their home to reminisce about the building's history and the serendipity that brought them all together.

As they overlooked the beautiful shore of the St. Johns River, they shared the same sentiment: that the timing and manner of their connection was no accident.

"This was God's work," Sister Couture said with a smile.

Young INDEPENDENTS

ASPIRING AND INSPIRING
LEADERSHIP

BY JENNIFER JENSEN
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

With more than a million people now calling Jacksonville “home”, The Resident News set out to discover young, independent residents out there who are truly worthy of the “one-in-a-million” title. These up-and-comers are making huge impacts in the community, whether it’s through real estate, banking or customer service.

Working to change Jacksonville for the better, our Young Independents are among the city’s best and brightest. They have a drive and a passion for what they do, and it is hard not to feel inspired in their presence. We rounded up just a few of these movers and shakers to discuss their career, passions, accomplishments and Jacksonville faves. The future is in good hands and it’s time to celebrate the contributions of the next generation of professionals... right here in our stomping grounds.

SAM MIDDLEKAUFF

Quick-study Sam Middlekauff has only been an associate at Colliers for two years, yet he’s already become very well versed in the “urban boroughs” — Riverside, Murray Hill, Avondale, San Marco and Springfield areas. He grew up in Jacksonville and knows all too well how Jacksonville’s downtown hasn’t really been a highlight for the city. But Jacksonville is changing quickly, and downtown development has been a major cause of that change.

“I’ve always felt like that’s the one area that’s held Jacksonville back from being on the radar with the Miamis and the Tampas,” he said. “It’s starting to get on the radar of a lot of these groups, whether it’s developers, whether it’s restaurants from out of town or businesses.”

In his position with Colliers, he focuses on urban, mixed-use development on the retail side. He is a part of bringing new businesses and new attractions to draw people to the city.

“It’s long hours and it’s a grind, but you have a reward at the end of it. You kind of have a chance to make an impact on the city.”

Middlekauff has a passion for his hometown and loves seeing the changes that are happening. Although he went to college at the University of Alabama, he came straight back to Jacksonville after graduation and soon was part of the development of the Federal Reserve building.

“The building was fully condemned. There were trees growing out of it. You look at it now, and it’s a beautiful courtyard, a fully renovated building,” he said, noting that it has been somewhat of a kickoff to some of this major development happening downtown.

When he’s not growing the urban neighborhoods, Middlekauff likes to golf, watch the Jaguars and attend events downtown. He’s also a proclaimed “foodie” and loves to try new restaurants that pop up around town while frequenting favorites Mesa in Avondale and bellwether downtown.

“It’s the area that I’ve grown up in, so I kind of live, work and play here,” he said.

TAYLOR MILLER

Born and raised in Jacksonville, Taylor Miller, like so many other natives, has a deep love for the Jaguars. But this lifelong dancer gets the unique privilege of showing her pride as part of the ROAR, the professional cheerleading squad of the Jacksonville Jaguars. She is a four-season veteran with the ROAR and will continue with them this upcoming season.

“I grew up dancing and just love to dance,” Miller said. Miller earned a two-year dance scholarship from the Florida State College at Jacksonville after high school, after which she pursued a career in the beauty industry. She attended the Parisian Spa institute and is a medical aesthetician at Amara Med Spa.

Miller has been in the aesthetic industry for five years performing facials, microneedling, chemical peels and more.

“Skin is the first thing people see when they talk to you,” she said. “I like helping people overcome any insecurities, helping people become more confident in their skin. It’s really a magical process when you can help people get through conditions such as like acne, melasma, rosacea, and just have that confidence to wear their skin without adding tons of makeup on it.”

When she isn’t working, the ROAR keeps Miller busy on and off the field. The team does appearances at different events, and Miller said one of the best parts is the volunteer work they do.

“Being on the field and dancing is only one little, tiny piece of everything we do, and it’s really been a super rewarding opportunity to be able to be a part of the team for so long,” she said.

Off the clock, Miller enjoys visiting the Riverside Arts Market on Saturdays or other attending events that take place around town.

“I always just try to support or go to whatever event is going on in Jacksonville,” she said.

LYMAN STARMER

At just 19, Lyman Starmer is no stranger to the business world. Two years ago, he started his first business called Highlands Marketing, and then introduced Perspective, a social network prioritizing bipartisanship. At the time, he was prepared to drop out of Wolfson High School to focus on his business. It was becoming too much to juggle, so Starmer spoke with the school’s principal to see if there was a way around having to attend school five days a week. They came up with a plan that allowed Starmer to stay enrolled in school while allowing him to keep his business up and growing.

“You don’t really have to always play by the rules, sometimes you just need to ask. And it’s always about how you ask,” Starmer said.

His current company, PeerLyfe, grew out of Perspective, and launched three months ago. Starmer noticed that out of all the social media platforms, there was no way for groups to consolidate all the information, control the narrative, and give residents a place to talk with other residents. So, he decided to create a kind of self-sustaining ecosystem, a private social network for communities.

He spends most of his time working, but it’s only because he is so passionate about it. And he likes helping other young entrepreneurs iron out their concepts and get that process started.

“I love solving problems,” he said. “I don’t want to say I know it all, but I want to give them advice for things I learned along the way.”

Starmer enjoys splitting up his workday so that he gets a different view, different perspective every day. He spends time in the office and then ventures to a different coffee shop every week in the afternoon. Some of his favorites are Southern Grounds, Brew and Vagabond.

“The Jacksonville coffee scene is pretty good,” Starmer said. “That’s where I get all my creative work done.”

PATRICK CARNEY

After graduating with a degree in marketing, Patrick Carney was introduced to the “great energy and passion” of Christian Harden and Keith Goldfaden, managing partners with NAI Hallmark.

“It was a little infectious,” Carney said.

So infectious, in fact, that he is coming up on his six-year anniversary with the company, now serving as its vice president, office specialist.

A Jacksonville native, Carney loves that he is able to make an impact on his hometown through his job.

“You kind of have an impact representing owners of real estate and on the Jacksonville landscape,” he said. “It’s pretty exciting.”

He has worked through the ranks, starting as a sales associate, then senior sales associate and now, vice president.

“I’m excited about being with Hallmark and want to continue to grow that legacy,” he said.

One of his proudest moments at his job was recently closing two deals on a property called the Concourse that dealt with government users.

“It was pretty difficult,” he said. “You’re going through government regulations — requirements that are much more intense and a more involved process than a normal office lease.”

When Carney isn’t working, he enjoys meeting different types of local, regional and national real estate owners, CEOs and CFOs, hear their stories and work hand-in-hand with them. He likes spending time outdoors, playing sports like tennis.

“[Tennis] is almost a dirty word, with all the excitement around pickle ball,” Carney said with a laugh.

He’s also training for his first triathlon, typically running along the iconic Riverwalk on the Northbank. He grew up at the beach and enjoys surfing as well.

“I’m kind of a jack of all trades,” he said. “I like to do a bit of everything.”

Carney frequents the Winston YMCA and Jacksonville’s famed coffee spots, especially Southern Grounds in San Marco. He plans to get more involved in the community and wants to find a passion outside of work where he can do some good.

BROOKS DAME

Born and raised in Jacksonville, Brooks Dame has an incredible sense of community and what it takes to make a difference at the local level. That passion is a perfect match for her current job as assistant to Jacksonville City Council Member Randy DeFoor, as well as her upcoming post with Council Member Jimmy Peluso, slated to start on July 1.

“Being able to be here at city hall and work, you have such a good opportunity to make change in people’s regular lives, whether it’s the pothole in front of their house or an overarching policy that affects them,” Dame said.

Prior, she worked at the Sulzbacher Center. “These are my roots,” Dame said. Working there allowed her to come to her current job with “a community lens and a nonprofit lens.”

Dame is also passionate about nature and hiking. She hiked the entire Appalachian Trail in college in somewhat of a spur-of-the-moment fashion. Her friend was heading off on the adventure and asked Dame if she wanted to join.

“One of my role models is my mom, and she is one of those, strong, independent women. So, I feel like I could tackle anything and do it. I was like, ‘I could do that,’” said Dame. “I didn’t realize what I was getting into.”

Yet, after five months of sleeping on the ground and eating oatmeal, she said it is still something she’s incredibly proud of.

Dame has a love for volunteering and civic-minded activities, volunteering at Schulzbacher once a month as well as at other nonprofits. She also enjoys attending different events and exploring the Jacksonville food scene. Some of her favorites are Orsay and 1748 Bakehouse.

“Only the bored are bored in Jacksonville,” Dame said.

PAUL TWUM

For Paul Twum, the best part of his job is fulfilling the needs of his private banker clients. He’s been at Chase since 2017 managing affluent clients and maintaining strong relationships between the client and the bank.

“I help them find solutions,” he said. “I help them with their worries and help change their thoughts around that problem. I watch them go from worried or having anxiety to leaving my office and feeling good about their situation at hand.”

Twum’s proudest moment is the acknowledgment of the stellar customer service his branch in San Marco has given the last three years.

“I’m really proud of being the No. 1 banker in all of Jacksonville, as far as making sure that folks are taken care of financially,” he said. “I provide stellar service across the board. If anybody has any issues with their bank and they want to give a Chase a try, just know that Paul will service the bejesus out of you.”

When he isn’t working, Twum enjoys giving back to his community and his alma mater, University of North Florida (UNF). He is a part of the student council to help UNF retain and bring more students into the school. He also enjoys mentoring students who are studying finance, helping to guide them and teaching them how to build a network and a brand. He also volunteers at several churches in San Marco and in Clay County, where his parents live.

Twum’s favorite local spots for great food are bb’s, River and Post and Hawker’s. When he’s not dining out, he fancies himself a novice cook. He likes testing out dishes he has seen on TikTok and social media.

“It’s a new passion for me,” he said. “I’ve made this nice pasta recipe that I’m really excited about.”

BRITTIANY LIGHT

Hair stylist Brittiany Light continues to work her way up toward master stylist at Hair Peace in Riverside. Currently working hard toward 4a, which will allow her to have the help of an associate, she said the best part of her job is the transformations.

"That's kind of why I got into it, because I love makeovers and making people feel really confident," Light said.

Hair Peace specializes in curly hair, and Light prides herself on teaching curlyheads how wear their hair natural, which they might have shied away from before because they didn't know how to style or manage it.

"Instead of straightening it, they can wear it natural, and just helping them learn how to do that can make a big difference," she said. "Even though you aren't changing who they are, you still do a transformation for them."

Light always wanted to do something creative with her career. She got her degree in fashion and ultimately ended up going to school for hair, calling it "a good way to make money and be creative."

When she isn't busy with hair transformations, she spends time with her dog, Scamp, who she says is exactly like her. She also enjoys hiking, going to the beach and exploring the different trails Jacksonville has to offer. One of her favorite spots is the Cummer Museum's outside garden.

"It's very pretty out there," she said. "And it has the water aspect. Anything with water is usually good for me. I am very much a nature person," said Light.

And she's no stranger to Jacksonville. Light grew up in Callahan and came to Jacksonville for most of her needs.

"When I needed to go to the grocery store, I had to go to Jacksonville," she said. "Jacksonville has so many great things. My favorite restaurant might be over here, but then I love going over to the beach or other areas to experience nature."

She has started to play tennis but admits it hasn't become a passion just yet. She is also a skilled baker — just ask about her white chocolate macadamia nut cookies.

"My friends always brag about my cooking, because when I throw parties, I always bake everything for it," she said.

AIDEN SIMONETTA

Although new to the area, Aiden Simonetta is making a name for himself in the Jacksonville real estate scene, along with his father, Phillip Simonetta. Aiden and his father opened Pier 21 Realty, a combination of a real estate brokerage and real estate school, about six months ago in Jacksonville.

"It seems like it's a growing city, so it was an area for opportunity for us. We felt we had value to offer, and the location itself had value for us as well," Aiden Simonetta said.

During the COVID lockdown, Simonetta was in college, but wanted to keep moving forward. "I talked to my dad and said, 'Hey, the world's kind of stopping right now, but I wanted to keep going. Can I work with you?'"

Simonetta got his real estate license, and two years later, his broker's license. He also has an instructor's license. One achievement he is specifically proud of was his first transaction when he worked on a horse farm.

"It gave me a commission of nearly $40,000," he said. "And it was life changing. I appreciate the fact that people trust me with those transactions. That they trust me with maybe the largest purchase they will make."

After that, he continued to grow.

"A lot of my success is due to my dad," Simonetta said. "He's been in the industry for decades. That really helped me get my footing. He showed me the ropes over the last few years, and I've grown from there."

When he isn't busy with the business, Simonetta likes weightlifting and playing video games. He also enjoys trying different food trucks around town and "all the typical, middle-aged guy things" like cooking and grilling.

OLIVIA STEINEMANN

When Olivia Steinemann first started working at Colliers, she wasn't sure what side of the business she wanted to be on — commercial or residential. But once she joined Matthew Clark's team, she was able to "really explore different sectors of the industry, find out what I like, find out what I don't like. And it really has allowed me to somewhat find myself as a young adult starting my career."

Although she isn't from Jacksonville — she grew up in Charlotte — Steinemann loves focusing on mixed-use development in downtown.

"For the longest time, all the locals, and people from Jacksonville in general, have been very jaded on downtown," she said. "There have been empty promises over the years and a lot of this development has not occurred. But now you have players — local players, out of town players — that have come to market and they're putting their money where their mouth is."

Steinemann said it is an exciting time to be a part of this growth. She wants to be involved in creating a place where people want to go and spend a Saturday shopping and dining under an urban landscape.

"These projects really allow you to create these districts in your urban core that have ceased to exist for the past 50 years," she said. "I really wanted to immerse myself in a more urban environment and bring out my creative side and work on projects that were very dynamic and had a lot of moving pieces to them, [ones that] brought in concepts from outside markets."

In her downtime, Steinemann gets centered through yoga. She also bikes, spends time at the beach and is a big foodie, loving Mesa, Black Sheep, River and Post, and Hawker's.

"When you have a lot going on, giving yourself an hour or two to really just focus on movement and clarity of the mind helps you on your day to day as well," she said.

Ultimately, Steinemann just feels very grateful to be where she is.

"To be able to sit down in a room with these developers and master planners who have worked their whole lives to create these dynamic environments, and being able to listen in and learn from them is quite the experience, and I'm very grateful for it," she said.

Emily Johnson

Bailey and Emily, Gators-Bulldogs rivalry, downtown.

Emily Johnson and Bailey Moore engagement.

Chubbs, whose person is Emily Johnson.

BY MARY WANSEER
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

Emily Johnson is a third-generation Jacksonville native who's holding onto a dream and working hard to fulfill it.

"My goal is to eventually live in Five Points," she said.

Johnson is a full-time occupational therapy assistant at HCA Florida Orange Park Hospital, formerly Orange Park Medical Center. She began working there last year after having earned her occupational therapy license from Florida State College at Jacksonville. She now is studying for her doctorate in the field. Johnson had been inspired to enter the profession while watching occupational therapists treat her teenage brother after a surgery to remove a brain tumor.

While pursuing her medical career, Johnson works a second job. For the past five years, she has been waitressing part-time at Hooters in San Jose. But more recently, that work has gone way beyond serving food to restaurant customers.

"I've been able to expand with the company in the last three years," she said. She takes part in the brand's national marketing campaigns and helps with local fundraising. She's so dedicated, in fact, that she was voted Hooters Girl of the Year in 2022.

Johnson's list is long of the causes to which she has dedicated time. The Buddy Walk to benefit the Down Syndrome Association of Jacksonville is one. There's also Think Pink that raises money for breast cancer awareness. And there are golf outings, like pro John Daly's Hair of the Dawg Golf Classic at San Jose Country Club where participants raised money for the Heart of a Lion Foundation, whose mission is to provide mental, physical and wellness support to children, veterans and first responders.

Golf outings come naturally to Johnson, as her favorite hobbies are outdoor events, and golf is her husband, Bailey Moore's, favorite sport. Blue Sky, The Amelia River Club, and Fernandina Beach Golf Club are courses they frequent. The couple is into football and baseball as well, relishing the friendly rivalry of Gator-Bulldog games as much as they delight in rooting together for the minor league's Jumbo Shrimp team.

Johnson and Moore like boating, too. They enjoy spending time on the waters of St. Augustine.

"He likes to fish, and I like to hang out with the family," Johnson said. Like Johnson, Moore has extended family in Jacksonville, mainly from his mother's side; his father's kin visit from Georgia. Often, Chubbs joins the boating expeditions with all of them. He's Johnson's Frenchie, named after Nick Chubb, who played for the University of Georgia prior to entering the NFL as a running back for the Cleveland Browns.

Johnson first met her husband when they were students at West Nassau High School just outside of Jacksonville. After their 2016 graduation, she stayed close to home, while Moore moved north to Georgia, closer to his father's side of the family. The couple reunited at the start of the pandemic when he returned to Jacksonville. They spent a lot of time together doing outdoor activities and then married this spring, on March 9, though autumn is their favorite season.

Dining and shopping in Five Points are on Johnson and Moore's list of favorite things to do around town. Almost monthly, they host a birthday event at Hoptinger Bier Garden and Sausage House. The gatherings are usually for friends, but sometimes they're for family members. An overnight stay at the beach often follows.

As to their Five Points goal, "We really like the atmosphere, how nice the area is, and the people," Johnson said. She and Moore plan to someday buy a home and raise a family there when they're ready to settle down and have a baby. In the meantime, they'll continue working, serving and dreaming.

First Duval Public School Police K9 Maverick

BY JULIE KERNS GARMENDIA
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

K9 Maverick, the first Duval County School Police (DCSP) K9 and Northeast Florida's first Firearms Detection K9, was sworn in by DCSP Chief Greg Burton on Wednesday, May 31, at Cline Auditorium. The new Duval County School Police Honor Guard presented the flag and the Pledge of Allegiance.

The two-year-old Belgian Malinois received his DCSP badge, paw-printed certificate, employee number, and identification. Chief Burton administered the oath of service to K9 Maverick and Officer Baker before a packed auditorium of Duval, Clay, and St. Johns county police, families, dignitaries, and school representatives.

Maverick then demonstrated his firearms detection skills by searching for an unloaded firearm, used only for training purposes, that someone previously hid. At Baker's command, K9 Maverick raced across the space in a grid pattern, moving so fast that he was almost a blur as everyone silently watched.

Within seconds, Maverick abruptly sat and snapped his head back toward Officer Baker; he found the firearm. Officer Baker's high-pitched, congratulatory yell startled everyone but thrilled K9 Maverick. Maverick froze, excited and pleased with himself, until Officer Baker tossed him his favorite green ball as a reward.

Chief Burton and St. Johns County Sheriff Robert Hardwick honored Duval County School Superintendent Dr. Greene for her many years supporting law enforcement that "enhanced protection for Duval County public schools and made it possible for police to do their best to keep children safe." They described the canine unit as one more step to protect and enhance security for schools, along with camera systems, metal detection, and fencing. Dr. Greene received the newly created DCSP Flag, designed by Administrative Sergeant Amy Thomas.

Chief Burton commended DCPS Lt. Amber Gazdick for her dedication and work to make the canine unit a reality for Duval County schools. Lt. Gazdick is DCSP Lieutenant of General Services responsible for six units, including canines. Lt. Gazdick is from a family of police officers and was the youngest graduate in her police academy class. She was the first woman in the Duval County School Police Department.

Officer Joe Baker and K9 Maverick

Officer Alison Connolly and trainee K9 LEO

Lt. Gazdick announced that the second member of the unit, K9 Officer LEO (Law Enforcement Officer), would soon join Maverick. K9 LEO, eleven months old, is training for narcotics detection with School Safety Officer Alison Connolly. K9 LEO is a poodle and Chesapeake Bay Retriever donated by Meagan Foglesong. Foglesong, the owner of Smart Paws Resort & Training, was described by Lt. Gazdick as a great supporter of the DCSP canine unit.

Officer Baker said that plans for the unit are to add more K9s and conduct their own in-house training. By 2024, Officer Baker will complete the required training courses.

Chief Baker said the unit's formation and training required for the canines and handlers attracted and united a uniquely skilled, dedicated group of police and supporters. He noted that it was also made possible by the long-term relationships and collaboration between the sheriff's offices and canine units of Duval, Clay, and St. John's Counties.

"We're all one family, one team in Northeast Florida — not separate counties," Lt. Gazdick said.

When the call went out to officers for the first K9 handler for the new unit, Chief Burton said that Officer Joe Baker responded, and many offered support. St. John's County Sheriff Robert Hardwick championed the project, as did Lieutenant Nicole Burrell of their canine unit. Lt. Gazdick said that Lt. Burrell helped obtain K9 LEO, set up training and budget, and performed many critical tasks.

"Sheriff Robert Hardwick allowed us to utilize his deputies and resources. He was passionate and always supportive of us and everything our department is doing," Lt. Gazdick said. "So many offered their support and skills on and off-duty."

St. John's County Patrol Lt. Steve Gazdick is a former canine handler who maintains his apprehension canine training certificate. His wife, Lt. Amber Gazdick, laughingly said that she actually "volun-told" him they needed his help. He teaches basic training to handlers and dog obedience on his own time and travels with her to test potential canines for the unit.

"My dream was always to be a police canine handler, and Steve has been incredibly supportive," Lt. Gazdick said. "When I had the opportunity to start this unit, it was a dream come true."

Corporal Nick Converso, a canine trainer and handler with St. John's County Canine Unit, helped locate dogs, explained training needs, and offered constant assistance. He helped to create policies for the new unit, obtained necessary equipment, and maintained contacts with the local canine community that benefitted everyone.

Clay County Sheriff Michelle Cook fully supported the new canine unit and was thanked at the ceremony. Officer Baker and K9 Maverick began training with the Clay County Sheriff's Office K9 unit on March 20, 2023. They completed their National Police Canine Association K9 Firearms Detection Certification on May 24, 2023.

"Maverick immediately showed incredible abilities. He had tremendous ball drive and non-stop motivation. He learned quickly and rapidly progressed through training. He found a firearm even when thrown into a large field of tall grass," Officer Baker said. "He's sweet with no aggression, never barks but whines when excited. He jumps straight into swamps and loves water — unless it's a bath. His favorite food is salmon."

K9 Unit Sergeant Mark Maertz of the Clay County Sheriff's Office has a son named Deputy Mark Maertz, who is a canine handler and imprinting trainer for their unit. Deputy Maertz trained Officer Baker and Maverick.

Officer Baker explained "imprinting" canine detection training to the audience. Kong dog toys were used to teach Maverick to imprint on specific odors because he loves them. The Kong toy was cut up, and a particular scent was placed inside. Then the scented toy was hidden, and Maverick learned to find it. This method taught him to detect — or imprint — on that specific scent at the same time he located his toy.

Gradually, as Maverick became faster, more skilled, and more accurate at locating the scented toy, only an object with the specific scent (firearm) the trainer wanted him to detect was hidden. Once Maverick successfully detects an odor, he sits and receives his toy plus loud verbal praise from Officer Baker as his only reward: no food treats.

Baker also explained that Maverick finds objects using an "air-scenting technique."

"When Maverick works, he air-scents by lifting his nose and intensely sniffing the air. He moves fast to detect odors. He slows his breathing during the search. It's so physically exhausting, he tires quickly, and his tongue hangs far out," Baker said. "When we smell spaghetti sauce, we notice the tomato aroma. Maverick's sense of smell is so sensitive he identifies every ingredient in an odor. He detects firearms, fired and unfired, live and spent ammunition, gun oil, black powder, smokeless powder, and pyradex explosive material."

Officer Baker and K9 Maverick are on call 24/7 to investigate threats and work events or conduct random school searches. Baker said Maverick had already found many guns in student cars parked in school parking lots.

Maverick lives with Officer Baker, his wife Lisa, and daughters: Savannah, 16; Payton, 12 and Addy, 2. They have two female pet dogs, a French Bulldog, Nani, and Boxer, Kona.

Lt. Gazdick thanked Sergeant Kristopher Bennett, her right hand at DCSP, who helped secure Maverick's donation from his friend, Marcus McCullugh of Limitless K9. McCullugh is a former U.S. Navy Seal who trains service and personal protection canines.

Lt. Gazdick thanked Marina Malan of Leica's Saving Paws Shepherd Rescue for offering potential canines to the unit and specializing in shepherd rescue. Also appreciated were Chimney Lakes Animal Hospital staff and Joshua Huitt, DVM, the unit's designated veterinarian clinic.

"They are fantastic with our dogs. We appreciate their excellent care and compassion for these police K9s and cannot recommend them more highly," Lt. Gazdick said.

Bishop Kenny seniors ACE awards

The Best Proposal winning team in the ACE awards' Community Support Facility category: Faculty sponsor Allison Gallup, Tommy Taylor, Natalie Barrett, Josie Rill, William Wallace and Grace Pendley with David Schoening.

Josie Rill receiving her ABC Women's Council Scholar award.

Grace Pendley receiving her Gilbane Scholar award.

The ACE (Architecture, Construction, Engineering) Mentor Program of Northeast Florida held an end-of-year celebration, student presentations and awards luncheon on April 28 at the Schultz Center. Bishop Kenny received top awards in both the team and individual categories.

The BK Life Lineup team was awarded Best Proposal for the Community Support Facility category. Senior Grace Pendley was awarded a $2,500 scholarship from Gilbane Building Company to continue her education in architecture at the Savannah College of Art and Design. Senior Josie Rill was awarded a $3,000 scholarship from the ABC Florida Women's Council to continue her education at Wake Forest University where she will pursue a degree in engineering.

"The most valuable benefit that students gain from participating in ACE is understanding their passions, and exposure to different design fields which helps students narrow their career options and decide what their major should be in college," said Rill.

"This year's competition was special because many of the seniors have been a part of the team since its founding four years ago. To watch them grow and become leaders, exploring different aspects of design, mentoring the younger students and watching them discuss their designs against others was especially rewarding," said ACE faculty sponsor, Allison Gallup.

Christopher Johnson will be the new Jacksonville Country Day School Head of School.

JCDS welcomes new Head of School

Jacksonville Country Day School (JCDS) has welcomed Christopher Johnson as its new head of school beginning with the 2023-24 school year.

Johnson officially stepped into the role on July 1. He succeeds former Head of School Pat Walker, who had held the position since 2014 and has been in the JCDS community for nearly 30 years.

"I am indeed a fortunate person to have been able to work at a place I've felt connected to since my first time on campus in the spring of 1994," Walker said. "I've loved this school as a happy parent, as a teaching assistant in 3rd grade, as a teacher in 1st grade, and as the Admissions Director. To cap that off with the great honor of being asked to be the Head of School, and serving in that capacity for nine years was a dream come true."

Johnson joins the San Marco community from Miami, where he completed the 2022-23 school year as Scheck Hillel Community School's head of upper school. He has been on the JCDS campus since July to prepare for the coming school year and also looks forward to having his own daughter attend the school as well.

"Being both a leader in the JCDS community and a parent provides me with a unique dual perspective and further fuels my commitment to our school's success" said Johnson.

Sulzbacher graduates Pre-K class

The Crawford Early Learning Center at Sulzbacher Village celebrated the graduation of its 2023 Pre-kindergarten class with a ceremony in its therapeutic garden on June 7. Nine children processed in traditional caps and gowns, sang, recited the Pledge of Allegiance and shared what each hoped to be when they grew up — which included an astronaut, hairstylist, firefighter and police officer.

“The Pre-K graduation is my favorite event that we do every year. Seeing the faces of the children and how proud they are of their accomplishments is so heartwarming. It gives us all hope for the future,” said Cindy Funkhouser, Sulzbacher president and CEO.

The Crawford Early Learning Center is the only trauma-informed, therapeutic early learning center for children living in poverty in Northeast Florida. It gives children a place to grow, learn and play in tandem with a place for their parents to receive the support they need. The Center is operated in partnership with the Florida Institute of Education at the University of North Florida.

80 years of educating the future

Darrell Edmunds, center, welcomed Cindy Pearson and Matt Carlucci to Hendricks Avenue Elementary's 80th celebration.

Hendricks Avenue Elementary School (HAE) celebrated its 80th birthday on May 26, 2023. Located in historic San Marco, the school was officially founded in 1942. HAE commemorated the milestone with a parade of students, with each grade representing a different decade, a musical performance by the fifth-grade chorus and remarks by Principal Darrell Edmunds.

Special guests Duval County School Board Member District 3 Cindy Pearson and City Councilman At Large Group 4 Matt Carlucci addressed the group as well. Pearson's three children attended HAE, while Carlucci, an HAE alum himself, has two children and two grandchildren who attended. Phan has been playing piano since he was four years old and has won competitions on the local, state and national levels. He is the principal keyboardist of the JSYO Philharmonic and plays for Bishop Kenny and his church on the weekends.

SJEDS third grader named winner in nonfiction writing contest

Third grader Juliette at San Jose Episcopal Day School was recently named a winner in the Scholastic Storyworks 3 nonfiction writing contest.

San Jose Episcopal Day School is celebrating third grader Juliette after she was selected a winner in the Scholastic Storyworks 3 nonfiction writing contest.

Contest participants had to demonstrate critical reading skills and then showcase their thinking in a “rigorous authentic writing activity.” Juliette’s winning piece discussing the life of inventor Garrett Morgan stood out with her solid comprehension of the story and her engaging response.

“We are so grateful to be working with educators like third grade teacher Mrs. Cynthia McKnight and Head of School Dr. Castleman, who support classroom participation in our writing contests,” shared Scholastic. “Thank you for fostering a dynamic learning culture at your school.”

Matthew Phan at his May 3 concert with the Jacksonville Symphony Orchestra.

Phan-tastic talent

Bishop Kenny High School junior Matthew Phan recently won the Jacksonville Symphony Youth Orchestra (JSYO) Young Artist Competition. As the winner of this prestigious competition, Phan was invited to play the opening piano solo supported by the Jacksonville Symphony Orchestra at its May 3 performance. He played Piano

Concerto No. 2 in C minor, Op. 18 III Allegro Scherzando by Sergei Rachmaninoff. Phan has been playing piano since he was four years old and has won competitions on the local, state and national levels. He is the principal keyboardist of the JSYO Philharmonic and plays for Bishop Kenny and his church on the weekends.

Leo Rodriguez receives a $2,000 scholarship from Exchange Club of Jacksonville’s Dave Ledbetter.

Rodriguez takes top honors from Exchange Club of Jacksonville

Bishop Kenny High School senior Leo Rodriguez has been selected by the Exchange Club of Jacksonville as its Male Student of the Year, receiving a $2,000 scholarship. The selection was based on Rodriguez’s outstanding scholarship, leadership, community service and character qualities.

The announcement was made at the Florida District Exchange Club’s annual convention in Jacksonville. Rodriguez now qualifies to compete at the district level for another $2,500 scholarship. He was selected from a pool of roughly 200 eligible students from public, private and charter schools in the area.

Rodriguez is a member of the cross country and track teams, and the English, Mu Alpha Theta, Rho Kappa, Science, Spanish and National Honor Societies. He is a BK Student Ambassador and an Extraordinary Minister of Holy Communion.

“I’ve enjoyed my time at Kenny because the culture here truly rewards those who are heavily involved in the school community, whether it’s through sports, clubs or academics. In the future, I’m planning to apply this same philosophy no matter where I end up or what I’m doing,” said Rodriguez.

He will attend the Honors College at the University of Florida and pursue a major in finance and economics.

Excellence Across Four Pillars

The Episcopal experience means learning extends far beyond the classroom. Episcopal prepares students for success in college and beyond through a balanced program built on Four Pillars: Academics, Athletics, Fine Arts, and Spiritual Life. Episcopal students find their passions while shaping who, not what, they will become.

Valedictorian Rosalie Howerton, Wolfson

Wolfson Celebrates Class of 2023

Samuel Wolfson School for Advanced Studies is celebrating the class of 2023. Together, the class of 162 seniors received acceptance letters from 152 different colleges and universities across the country and earned more than $13 million in academic scholarships, record-breaking numbers in Wolfson's recent history. The graduating class had six national merit scholars, including three finalists, and six student athletes commit to play collegiate sports.

These are huge celebrations for Wolfson, which has long been a staple of the Jacksonville community and now a dedicated, academic IB and AP magnet school. Students in the top 10% of Wolfson's graduating class opted to attend a variety of schools, both in state and farther away, including University of Florida, Florida State, and University of Central Florida as well as Harvard University, Northwestern University, Johns Hopkins University, United States Air Force Academy, UNC-Chapel Hill, and Auburn University.

Valedictorian Rosalie Howerton will attend University of Florida to study engineering while Salutatorian Charlotte Caccam will be at Harvard University studying medical sciences.

The Temple celebrates 140 years of deep roots in Jacksonville

BY WINDY TAYLOR
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

Congregation Ahavath Chesed, known to almost everyone in Jacksonville as The Temple, commemorated its 140th anniversary with a gala in May by reflecting on its storied past to build a vibrant vision for the future.

Like the Israelites in Exodus, The Temple spent decades moving around Jacksonville before settling into its current location on San Jose Boulevard in 1979. The Temple was chartered in 1882 in a beautiful building on Laura Street, and its first president, Morris A. Dzialynski, was Jacksonville's only Jewish mayor. This original building was destroyed in the Great Fire of 1901, and was the first house of worship rebuilt afterwards, at the corner of Laura and Ashley streets.

In 1927, the congregation purchased a Henry Klutho-designed building in Riverside, at the corner of St. Johns Avenue and Mallory Street, to serve as a community center. That building was also destroyed by fire, in 1940, which resulted in the loss of all Temple records. Again, the congregation rebuilt and eventually outgrew the space, necessitating the move to San Jose.

Rabbi Maya Glasser holds the Torah.

Many families have remained faithful to The Temple in all its iterations.

"My mother was born in 1904, and she was confirmed at The Temple," said Linda Wilkerson (nee Fink), whose family has belonged to the congregation for generations. "My husband had a relative who was a charter member."

Wilkerson and her husband, the late Dr. Albert Wilkerson, Jr., both grew up going to services at The Temple. The Wilkersons married in 1955 and have four children and nine grandchildren, all of whom have been confirmed at The Temple. Many have also had their bar- or bat-mitzvah there, as well.

The Temple confirmation class of 1902.

"When I was young, the rabbi was Israel Kaplan, and his wife [Cora] was a wonderful storyteller. I remember going to the temple home and listening to her tell stories. In fact, one of my children had a birthday, and I asked Mrs. Kaplan to come tell stories at the birthday party," said Wilkerson.

Rabbi Kaplan was succeeded by Sidney Lefkowitz, who drew Wilkerson back to The Temple.

"Before that, I tried to get my parents to join the [Episcopal] Church of the Good Shepherd because they had a pool," Wilkerson said. "I was a teenager when Sidney Lefkowitz came; he was like the pied piper. He restored my faith in The Temple and in Judaism. It was a big period of growth for us."

The Temple's current rabbi is Maya Glasser, who moved to Jacksonville two years ago at the height of the pandemic. Unlike many rabbis who have led the synagogue, Rabbi Glasser is young and female, yet she sees herself as fitting perfectly well into the lineage of forward-thinking, community-focused leaders who have held the position.

"One of the themes in our history is our interfaith work," Glasser said. "We know that we are not in a primarily Jewish area, so it's been one of our values to get to know our neighbors."

The Temple 1882.

The congregation's history is a testament to this commitment. In 1917, Rabbi Israel Kaplan organized Jacksonville's first Interfaith Thanksgiving Service, a tradition which continues to this day and involves around thirty different faith groups. The Temple was one of the founding members of OneJax, an interfaith organization created in 2005 to emphasize civility and respect as cornerstones of the community. In addition, The Temple participates in an annual pulpit swap with Hendricks Avenue Baptist Church, and every Christmas the congregation members bake cookies for first responders and the homebound.

Rabbi Glasser, who moved from New York, has come to love her new hometown. "I love the pace," she said. "I love that people want to have conversations with each other and interact with each other. I love that everyone is polite and respectful."

Rabbi Glasser gave a speech at the 140th anniversary gala in which she reminded members to live out their values as they continue to look forward. "I'm helping us acknowledge where we came from in order to build a strong future," she said. "Especially in this era we're living in, where people are not coming together to explore different viewpoints. Our doors are always open. People are welcome to come to our services, come to our programs; we love when people come with questions."

The Temple holds regular services on Friday at 7:00 p.m. and Saturday at 10:30 a.m. All are welcome.

The theme of The Temple's gala was "Honoring our Past, Celebrating our Present, and Building our Future." The steering committee, co-chaired by Miriam Greenhut and Nicole Brown, chose to embody this theme by using the synagogue's 100-year-old, stained-glass windows as inspiration. This milestone has given the members of The Temple an opportunity to reflect on how they can continue to be a force for good over the coming decades.

Congregation Ahavath Chesed has been on San Jose Boulevard since 1979.

"My hope for the future of the temple is that it continues to draw people who will support it and let it support them," said Wilkerson. "Hopefully this celebration will remind people how much the temple has meant to them through the years. It will indicate permanence. It's been part of our community for so long and still serves as a living, functioning entity which adds to the quality of life in Jacksonville. We've stood for something, and I hope we always will."

FROM MY EMPTY NEST PERCH

BY SUSANNA BARTON
RESIDENT COMMUNITY NEWS

It sounded stupid. I swore I'd never do it. But then I gave it a whack, and now I love it. Today, I rally my utmost gratitude for all things...pickleball.

Pickleball, I'm here to tell you, is fun — like, SUPER FUN. It lives up to the hype and likely is what many folks would put at the top of their neighborhood gratitude list. Our Resident Community is rich with pickleball court options, resources and experts, which is probably why it's such a thing around here. If the Resident Community neighborhoods were in a match against any other area of the city, it would be a Golden Pickle win every single time.

We are in good company. According to the 70,000-member USA Pickleball association, the sport is exponentially attracting new players year after year. The group's membership alone increased 30% between February 2022 and 2023. It quoted a 2023 report from the Sports & Fitness Industry Association, which named pickleball the "fastest-growing sport in America for the third year in a row. According to the report, pickleball is now up to a total of 8.9 million players in the United States over the age of six years old, an increase from 4.8 million in 2022."

The Association of Pickleball Professionals' 2023 APP Pickleball Participation report showed more than 26.5 million people played the sport from August 2021 to August 2022, with more than 8.5 million people playing pickleball eight times or more during that 12-month period.

That's a lot of pickleballing. And the local scene is keeping pace. So much so that last year, construction began on a new pickleball facility in The Yards in Ponte Vedra Beach. Located in TPC Sawgrass, The Yards' Pickle Garden includes 12 lighted courts — a real mammoth court collection in Northeast Florida. More projects and court concepts are on the drawing boards in our area and around the First Coast.

Truth is, pickleball has a founding foothold in our Resident Community. And though no one has put pen to paper on the numbers, our neighborhood seems to be a real hot spot for the sport.

There are public courts at the Southside Tennis Complex next to the San Marco Public Library and several at Boone Park in Avondale. Courts also beckon at the Winston Family YMCA on Riverside Avenue and Ortega Life Center at Ortega Church on Roosevelt. A pickleballing friend told me there are indoor courts at the Cuba Hunter Community Center on Bedford Road, too, though I have not seen them.

(Sidenote: I got the low-down on the local pickleball offerings from jaxpickleballstore.com. This business seems to be the epicenter of the local pickleball universe. Jax Pickleball Store — located right here in the neighborhood just north of San Marco Square — is Jacksonville's first and only pickleball-exclusive retailer in Jacksonville. To boot, it is run by seasoned local business superstar and pickleball ace, Andy Zarka, of European Street fame. Does it get any more local than that? I think not.)

Private institutions in our area also are invested in pickleball currency.

Neighborhood clubs, including Timuquana Golf & Country Club, have developed impressive courts and facilities for their members in recent years. The kids are even learning it at some area schools, and I know this because my nieces told me it's an actual middle school PE unit at The Bolles School. If our Easter weekend match is any measure, they are getting some SERIOUS expert-level training out of that class. I haven't run or laughed that much in years — I could barely breathe, much less return their serves and dinks! But no hips were broken, #Blessed.

For those who aren't enrolled in a PE class anymore, pickleball lessons and clinics are widely available in our neighborhoods. The Spring Park-based nonprofit, Pine Castle, which empowers adults intellectual and developmental differences, has indoor gymnasium courts open for pickleball clinics according to the Jax Pickleball Store's Learn-to-Play Intro Clinic page. Also listed are instructors who can teach pickleball lessons at venues throughout the city, including some of the courts mentioned above.

Pickleball is taking over the local landscape, it seems — one former tennis court, gymnasium and private school PE class at a time.

I just like it because it's easy to try, and you can proceed at your own pace. At my age, I'm not looking to win anything except a generous pour of chardonnay and a good night's sleep every once in a while. My pickleball goals are pretty simple: to sweat, burn a few calories, laugh and get some natural contour shading on my cheeks while flexing old tennis muscles with opponents who wouldn't dare rush the net to return a net dink because they, too, value their hips and hamstrings. I just want to have fun out there and remain physically intact.

I am fortunate to have met these goals and more through the people who introduced me to the game. They are kind, very patient, new friends, and I am grateful to know them. My misadventures in pickleball began with a text from a friend who said her neighbors Ellen and Jocelyn were looking for a fourth player to round out a reserved court session. Curious about pickleball's widespread allure, I responded with a "sure" and agreed to give this dumb-sounding game a whirl. My first discovery was that these ladies were NICE. They shared the basic rules of the game, how to hold the racket and where NOT to stand in pickleball, i.e., the Kitchen. We practiced hitting the ball back and forth, then learned how to serve and score and then jumped into a few games. It was VERY low key. And fun — times infinity. After years of hearing about the game, I finally understood its popularity. After that, it was all about retraining my brain to remember scores and do math without getting carried away by the sun and light breezes and mouthwatering sauteed GARLIC smells wafting over from the Hurricane Grill & Wings. Plus, they kept asking me back to play again, which is very generous of them.

The hardest part seems to be reserving a court. This process is calculating and requires a call-in reservation 24 hours or more ahead of time. Securement of a 1.5-hour time slot is not always guaranteed, because — crazy demand. But once you're in — you're in! Let the fun begin! You can play with two, three or four people, and can even rotate more folks in if everyone on your pickleball group text says yes to the ask. The rules are pretty simple. While you can read up on them at usapickleball.org and feel prepared, I've found it's easiest to just play the game and learn as you go. Whatever you do, just remember these pickleball basics:

- You are playing to at least 11 and must win by two.
- Stay out of "the Kitchen" (the 7-foot no-volley zone on either side of the net) unless you are well educated on the rules.
- The server is the only player who can score a point.
- You must be behind the baseline to serve.
- Know which lines are in- and out-of-bounds.
- The ball has to bounce once per side after the serve.

There are more rules, but those are the main ones. Truly, the hardest part of the game is getting your brain to perform the seemingly simple task of keeping score. And ball-chasing!

While our pickleballing continues to be fun-focused, I know there are plenty of "in it to win it" folks out there on the courts who have much higher standards in mind. So, if you're that kind of baller, good news: your competitive local pickleball tribe is out there and they're crushing it on the daily.

From my very untrained perspective, these folks are the same ones who dominate in tennis tournaments — the ones who WILL risk hamstring and hip to return that net dink from the baseline. They are competitive and GOOD. Their balls don't roll onto other courts and disrupt plays like ours do. They have control, strategy and good motor skills — the full pickleball package. And like the tennis elite, there are local, regional and national tournaments in which they can play and teams and coaches who can get them there. All that to say, if you want to dominate on the pickleball courts, bring it. You have every opportunity to win your way to world champion status from our humble neighborhood courts.

I am grateful, however, that most of the pickleballers I'm seeing out there are patient with the whoopsies and air ball wallops and wayward whacks. To me, that's a win for everyone. It's community-building, it's fun, it's life.

Susanna Barton will not be playing in national pickleball championships anytime soon but has gotten better about containing her "oh nos!!!" while running to return a shot. She raised her family in Granada and has written professionally for The Jacksonville Business Journal, The Resident, Jacksonville University and The Bolles School. She currently manages an online community called Grand Plans, which addresses geri-scaries and all things elderly on www.mygrandplans.com. Each month, she will share reflections on neighborhood qualities for which she is grateful.

THE WAY WE WERE

BY MARY WANSEER

Phyllis Geiger

"Everything in life is sweetened by risk." That's the epitaph beneath the photo of Phyllis Geiger in The Williston Northampton School's 1965 yearbook. How prophetic that statement turned out to be. Nearly two decades later, Phyllis risked everything she had and successfully translated the European art of hand tempering chocolate into an American neighborhood experience that first went public in San Marco and has since expanded throughout Florida and up into Georgia and Alabama.

Phyllis was born in Westchester, New York and grew up with her elder sister, Izzi, in Darien, Connecticut. They moved there with their father and his new wife after their mother had passed away from breast cancer when the girls were only 5 and 8 years old. Along with their luggage, the sisters carried with them the prayers their mother had recited with them every night, the psalm she had helped them commit to memory, her sense of humor, and her Irish resiliency.

In Darien, Phyllis held the title of first female lifeguard at Pear Tree Point Beach. At 15, she moved to Massachusetts to board at Williston where she was known to be a socialite and somewhat of a prankster. From there, she attended college before marrying and becoming a mom.

Phyllis's first husband worked for Proctor and Gamble. "There's a reason it's called P&G. It's pack and go," she said. "We moved 12 times in 13 years." There were three stays in Cincinnati, Ohio near corporate headquarters, one for each time her husband had earned a promotion. Phyllis recounted how each time she had just furnished and decorated a new home, they'd have to move again.

In the late 1970s, with two young children, Peter and Brooke, the family was transferred to Kansas City, Missouri. In the midst of motherhood and housewifery, Phyllis began working as an apprentice at a local high-end company called Kron, where she was trained in the European method of making chocolate. "I fell in love with it," she said. She went to Switzerland several times and had asked her chocolatier trainer what the equivalent would be in the United States. "There is nothing American like this," he told Phyllis. A dream dawned.

In the early 1980s, the family of four was transferred from Kansas City to Jacksonville. They lived in Ponte Vedra, at first, and then Atlantic Beach for a bit. And though Phyllis liked it near the shore, she kept asking people, "Where would be the center of Jacksonville to start a business?" She had a sweet vision in mind and a written plan in hand, but she was new in town and unfamiliar with the lay of the land. Residents in the know pointed her toward San Marco. Phyllis didn't know where that was but hoped it wasn't at the beach. She and her children wanted solid ground and fertile soil to plant some roots. So, Phyllis ventured off to find San Marco. "It was obviously the right place. Totally!" she said.

Forty years ago, San Marco wasn't like it is today. "Now it's very cosmopolitan, hip, and trendy. But back then, it was a different story," Phyllis said. Investors were buying property and encouraging new businesses to come. There was a lot of renovation going on in the neighborhood.

That was a busy time for Phyllis, too. In a single week in 1983, her father re-married, she divorced, and she opened a chocolate shop at 1970 San Marco Boulevard. She named it Peterbrooke Chocolatier, for both of her children.

The savor that Peterbrooke is known for is a specific blend of dark, milk, and white chocolates that Phyllis had adopted from Nestlé in Switzerland and adapted for the US market. "Tastes are regional," Phyllis had known all along. Northerners prefer dark. Southerners have sweet palates. She translated what she had been taught into an American product. "I had this idea and just went forward with it," she said.

In the beginning, Phyllis would travel back and forth every morning from the beach house to the shop and tend to the daily routine, which started with dipping berries. But that commute changed not long afterwards. "Divorce papers landed in the chocolate," she said.

Phyllis bought a house in San Marco on Alexandria Place to live in with the children closer to her business, and their father bought a house nearby on Sorrento Road. Peter and Brooke were elementary school age and could bike back and forth between each home and Pic & Save. "It worked out pretty well for them," Phyllis said. It was a tight-knit community where everybody knew each other and watched out for others' kids.

The business community, too, was mutually supportive. Phyllis's second Christmas in town found her among the other business owners surrounding the pre-lions wedding-cake fountain in the center of The Square, offering nibbles to the carolers and guests at the annual Holiday Magic gathering. Desiring to fit in, but desperate not to cut too deeply into her startup profits, Phyllis headed to the San Marco Theatre for a few buckets of fresh popped corn that she then drizzled with a sparing amount of her expensive chocolate recipe and separated into bite-sized chunks. After that night, Phyllis realized she had a new product!

Within three years, Peterbrooke had outgrown its original location and moved up the street to 2024 where it still stands today. That's where Phyllis met her second husband, pilot and orthodontist Dr. H.L. Geiger, a native of Ohio who had opened his Jacksonville dental practice back in 1968.

The couple married at All Saints Episcopal Church in 1989 and moved to River Road when her children were 11 and 15. By then, Phyllis had already opened her second Peterbrooke store on St. Johns Avenue as one of the Shoppes of Avondale. A year later, she opened the third, this time in Atlantic Beach near where her family had lived for a time when they were still new to the Jacksonville area.

In the mid-1990s, Phyllis enrolled in an intense confectioner's course at Gannon University in Pennsylvania to learn the science behind making big batches of chocolate. With the expansion of business, a separate production facility had become necessary, one to accommodate large vats. Peterbrooke was flourishing!

By 2002, Phyllis was ready to move farther away from the bustle. That's when she bought her current San Jose, Bob-Broward-designed river home from her friend and mentor, Bobbi Yoffee. Phyllis had spent many hours in that house over the years, creatively working with Bobbi, a calligrapher, on ads and artwork for Peterbrooke and for Café Carmon, a bistro in San Marco that was another business Phyllis had partnered in.

In 2012, Phyllis thought she might be ready to retire. So, she sold the chocolate business to Billy Morris, CEO of Bubba Burger, and the Peterbrooke name went franchise. Brooke bought the Atlantic Beach store. Peter went in a different direction within the field of confection; he now owns Sweet Pete's Candy on Hogan Street downtown.

"There's candy all over the place, still. We never lack for any sweets," Phyllis said. Throughout the years, she often heard from others how dentists must love her being in the candy business and how she ought to marry one. Well, she did! "I wreck them. He fixes them," she would tell people. Unfortunately, her husband passed away a few years ago.

Without him, Phyllis still loves to travel. She often takes trips north to visit with Izzi. She still supports her Massachusetts alma mater. And last year, the University of Florida's Eric Friedheim Tourism Institute welcomed her to their advisory board.

When she's back home in Jacksonville, Phyllis loves to cook, as do Peter as well as his son, Daniell, Phyllis's only grandchild. What's uncanny is that Brooke's husband is chef-level, too. "My kids are major foodies. They've gone into fine cuisine," Phyllis said. Afterwards, there's no doubt what's on the family's dessert menu. Candy!

Why Pre-Planning Your Funeral Service is a Beautiful Opportunity

Pre-planning for your funeral may seem like an odd notion, but it's the best way to be prepared and ensure that no difficult decisions need to be made at an emotionally taxing time.

Why Pre-Plan?

Pre-planning your funeral ensures a peaceful and organized ceremony. Rather than making painstaking and emotional decisions within a matter of hours or days, pre-planning allows you and your family to carefully consider your options and take your time in deciding what the best course of action may be for your unique situation. Additionally, pre-planning grants you the extra time to enhance your personalized experience, taking the necessary time to ensure your wants and needs are met. For example, with the addition of one of our Life Story packages, our skilled Life Story team will create a custom memorial table based on your personal interests, life experiences, and just about anything you can think of. There are so many options to choose from to make your service as unique as you are, so you can be proud of the results.

From a financial perspective, pre-planning your funeral arrangements assures that your costs for services will be exactly as advertised when you make your purchase. If the prices for what you've chosen rise after you've already made your purchase, you have nothing to worry about, as prepaying protects you from rising costs and inflation. At Hardage-Giddens, we provide feasible monthly payments to help make your decision more budget-friendly, as we understand that planning your ideal service is a worthwhile investment. Prepaying typically covers the cost of your casket or urn, the venue of your choice, catering, and other important elements that go into making your - or that of your loved one's - commemoration authentic and memorable.

When Should I Pre-Plan?

There is no right or wrong time to pre-plan for your funeral, or that of your spouse, child or parent, for that matter. While discussing this topic can be emotional, we encourage people of all ages to make arrangements. We've found that having the willingness to delve into somewhat uncomfortable territory can ultimately be a huge gift - not only for your own peace of mind; but for that of your family and friends as well. Handling such an important event in advance allows you to rest easy knowing that all of the finite details have already been taken of.

People of all ages, from their early twenties to much later in life, make the decision to pre-plan. We understand this can be an emotional experience, so we encourage you to come see us once you're ready. Whether that's today or a year from now, we'll be here to make sure our caring, licensed professionals are guiding you through every step of the process, meeting your needs and exceeding your expectations.

Is Pre-Planning Right for Me?

Planning in advance provides clarity and prevents anyone from making difficult decisions that they may be unsure about. Even if you've previously discussed your wishes with your family, grief can make it difficult to think clearly and recall what was talked about. This is why pre-planning is essential - not only to guarantee you get the service you want, but also to allow your family to be fully present when the time comes to celebrate life. The majority of feedback we receive from families that have attended prepaid funeral ceremonies is that attendees were able to face this emotional day with comfort and ease knowing that logistics had already been handled well in advance.

Pre-planning ensures your funeral service will turn out exactly how you've envisioned it. Conversely, if you aren't sure exactly what to plan, we can help with that as well. Our staff is here to listen and work in tandem with you to assure your wishes are met.

Please reach out to any of our locations and we'll be happy to guide you through the process.

Let us help you celebrate your way, we can show you how today!

"Hardage-Giddens shares its Core Values of Respect, Integrity, Enduring Relationships, and Service Excellence and thanks you for Generations of families served here in Jacksonville and the surrounding areas. Please allow us the honor in creating a lasting Celebration of Life for many Generations to come."
