CHANGE OF COMMAND WELCOMES NEW COMMODORE, FLAG OFFICERS

The new Epping Forest Yacht and Country Club 2024-25 board: Tim Miller, Tom Harris, C.R. Chad Munsey, Grant Bledsoe, Laura Phillips Edgcombe, Founder Herbert H. Peyton, Commodore Ryan Rafferty, Vice Commodore Nathan Adams, Rear Commodore Kristen Inman, Fleet Captain Brian Shell, Scott Taylor, Danny Falero (not pictured, Immediate Past Commodore Jody Brandenburg)

Tradition reigned at the 36th annual Change of Command Ceremony and Dinner at Epping Forest Yacht and Country Club April 5 as leaders, membership and guests reunited along the banks of the St. Johns River to celebrate the raising of the flag - a symbol of the next commodore to rise to command. The executive officers were announced and Ryan Rafferty relieved Jody Brandenburg as commodore. Rafferty is the 28th commodore of Epping Forest Yacht and Country Club. Nathan Adams assumed the 2024-25 executive position of vice commodore; Kristen Inman, rear commodore; Brian Shell, fleet captain; and Jody Brandenburg, immediate past commodore.

CHEERS TO 100 YEARS

St. Nicholas resident Robert Bradford celebrated a milestone with neighbors as they gathered to enjoy his 100-year birthday party on Palmer Terrace. Complete with cake, ice cream and libations, many longtime neighbors, friends and families rallied around the WWII veteran, tugboat captain and A&P grocery man, as they sang "Happy Birthday" at the top of their lungs!

"The hardest thing I've ever had to endure is living alone," said Bradford, who spent 73 years in marriage to his beloved Wilma, whom he misses every day. Bradford was also present on D-Day at the beaches of Normandy as a merchant mariner. Learn more about Bradford in an upcoming issue of The Resident News.

Honoring the Fallen

The Knights of Columbus, St. Bernadette Assembly hosted its annual Memorial Day Ceremony at the Historic St. Nicholas Cemetery. Flags were placed at the graves of 21 veterans interred in the cemetery.

In attendance were members of SNAP (St. Nicholas Area Preservation), Fr. Jason Trull from Assumption Catholic Church, Boy Scout Troop 106 and Knights of Columbus, Blessed Trinity Assembly.

Tougher Enforcement Coming for Derelict Vessels

BY LAURA PHELPS

Efforts to strengthen the enforcement of ordinances that limit long-term anchoring and abandoned vessels in Jacksonville waterways are progressing with the help of the city's Office of General Counsel, according to Jacksonville Waterways Commission member Mike Barker.

The city's legal minds are currently working to combine two ordinances that govern these issues in order to provide law enforcement with a simple framework.

It's the latest chapter in a years-long battle to address derelict or abandoned vessels in the city's waterways, an issue that has garnered the support of local and state elected officials, Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation (FWC), law enforcement and the boating community.

Abandoned vessels are more than eyesores. They can damage other boats and docks if they break loose during storms or sink into the river. Barker estimates approximately three vessels sink in the river every year, and each can cost the city as much as $30,000 to remove.

In 2021, Florida District 12 Rep. Wyman Duggan successfully passed a measure that granted counties the power to impose anchoring restrictions in urban areas with narrow waterways and significant boating traffic. In 2022, Jacksonville's City Council passed ordinances that separately address long-term anchoring and the removal of abandoned vessels.

"The problem was that it was confusing everybody, including law enforcement," Barker said. He reached out to Jacksonville's Office of General Counsel and invited them to a series of meetings with law enforcement agencies. Attorneys recommended combining and simplifying the ordinances to create a clear enforcement framework.

"There's going to be one set of ordinances that will cover how long a vessel can sit there and what the penalties will be if you anchor and leave a boat there. And it's going to make it just a lot simpler for everybody to understand, a lot cleaner," Barker said.

Barker also said that under the current laws, the timeline for removal is too long and the fines are too small. After three rounds of citations and fines totaling less than $500, it can take more than five months to remove an abandoned vessel, Barker said.

"What that means is for less than $500 somebody could just drop their boat over the summer and let it sit here for three or four months. And that didn't make any sense. Clearly, they're just trying to avoid marina fees," Barker said.

Barker said the newly drafted ordinance will impose larger fines and reduce the timeline for removal down to two months.

"We welcome engaged boaters. If you're a legitimate mariner and you're cruising the eastern seaboard, and you want to come and visit – great. We welcome that. But don't bring your junker here and dump it," Barker said.

On its website, FWC has a searchable map that shows the locations of derelict vessels in Florida. The map shows approximately 16 derelict vessels in Duval County, nine of which are pending removal, including one 30-foot vessel in the Cedar River that was initially reported in September 2023. The rest are under investigation.

Barker expects the Office of General Counsel to finish drafting the new, simplified ordinance in the next month or so, and it could go before the City Council for a vote this summer.

Downtown Investment Authority to Consider New Proposal for Laura Street Trio

BY MICHELE LEIVAS

There may soon be movement on a new redevelopment agreement for Jacksonville's Laura Street Trio as previously published reports indicate the development team has submitted a new proposal for review.

The Downtown Investment Authority (DIA) walked back the decision to end negotiations with SouthEast Development Group following a pair of board and committee meetings in April, instead amending its initial resolution to say it is still "willing and able" to negotiate a redevelopment agreement, though it still firmly rejected the developer's "untenable" March 30 proposal.

According to published reports, the new proposal submitted by SouthEast Development Group includes $22 million in loans from the Downtown Preservation and Revitalization Program, cash grants totaling $49 million and a forgivable $2 million city loan. It also drops the highly contested loan guarantee clause.

If approved, this proposal will not be the first redevelopment agreement between the city and the development team for the historic trio. Following the April DIA committee meeting, DIA CEO Lori Boyer said there had been three redevelopment agreements previously signed with this developer that "were requested, were vetted, were approved" and went before City Council.

The most recent agreement was in 2021, though Boyer said that agreement was for a "hotel only" on Laura Street and had no multifamily component. Since then, the development has evolved.

Current designs outline an Autograph Collection Hotel by Marriott offering 143 guest rooms, multiple restaurants and bars, ground-level retail space and 169 multifamily units, of which roughly 30% will be in the workforce category to these historic buildings.

SouthEast Development Group Principal and Managing Director Steve Atkins did not respond to multiple requests for comment on this latest proposal.

Southbank Development Taking Shape

BY MICHELE LEIVAS

Development along Jacksonville's Southbank is progressing as two of its projects – RiversEdge: Life on the St. Johns and Artea at Southbank – continue to evolve.

The highly anticipated RiversEdge project by Dallas-based developer Preston Hollow Community Capital LLC (PHCC) will finally start to see vertical construction as Toll Brothers, Inc. begins construction on the 40 luxury townhomes within the development.

In a joint press release last month, PHCC and Toll Brothers announced Toll Brothers' purchase of 2.75 acres within the RiversEdge development for the two- to four-bedroom townhomes with three baths and two-car garages, ranging from 1,844 to 2,085-plus square feet. The townhomes will also include rooftop terraces with "an array of designer-appointed features."

Jacksonville Toll Brothers Group President Greg Netro said, "Toll Brothers at RiversEdge is an exciting townhome community on the St. Johns River, coming soon to Jacksonville. The community is in a great location nearby the future Southbank Riverwalk extension."

Netro added that sales for the townhomes will begin later this fall.

The Resident News inquired about the next phases of construction on the RiversEdge development with PHCC, including details on any additional partners for further vertical construction. In an e-mail, PHCC Associate Director Madeleine Rehfeld said Preston Hollow is "not quite ready to share additional details regarding the development at this time."

Renderings of Toll Brothers, Inc.'s townhomes at the RiversEdge: Life on the St. Johns, which are currently under construction.

When completed, RiversEdge will feature 1,130 high- and mid-rise residential units, 40 townhomes, a 125-slip marina, more than 100,000 square feet of restaurant, retail and entertainment space, and will be able to accommodate 200,000 square feet of office space. At PHCC's unveiling event last November, plans were also shared to include a 200-room boutique hotel at RiversEdge.

Toll Brothers, Inc. is the first vertical developer to join the development.

Adjacent to RiversEdge, Corner Lot Development Group's Artea at Southbank is expected to complete construction ahead of schedule.

While the initial overall completion date was initially anticipated for September 2025, Corner Lot Director of Construction Chris Anthony said it is "currently tracking for June 2025" with the first phase (consisting of the leasing office and 122 units) now anticipating an October 2024 completion date, up six months from its original April 2025 estimated date.

When completed, Artea at Southbank will feature 340 multi-family units ranging from studios to two-bedrooms across a four-story building. The development will also include a rooftop deck, pool, several amenity spaces and an "artistically screened-in" parking garage offering 425 spaces.

The Artea at Southbank development is facilitated through a partnership between Corner Lot Development Group and the Jacksonville Transportation Authority (JTA) as part of the JTA's Transit Oriented Development Program. It will connect to the authority's San Marco Skyway rail station and new bike and pedestrian corridors.

Pre-leasing for Artea at Southbank is expected to begin in July.

District 5 City Councilmember Joe Carlucci said his office is working to add public spaces in the area following these projects to enhance residents' and guests' experience in the Southbank area. These spaces include playgrounds, splash pads, turf fields, pickleball and tennis courts and a dog park.

"RiversEdge and Artea are transforming our Southbank area," he said. "The development community is stepping up and it's time we do the same. I believe the go-outside-and-play type of experiences will only grow in the coming years and our city needs to provide that for those not living out in the suburbs."

While he said he is "eager" to share plans for these public spaces with the community, Carlucci added he "wants to make sure we have a thoughtful design in place beforehand."

City Council Considers Incentives for “More Ambitious” Development

BY MICHELE LEIVAS

A $58.79 million incentives package is going before the Jacksonville City Council for Miami-based Related Group's proposed Southbank development.

The 3.02-acre parcel, located at 835 Museum Cir., was the site of former local landmark River City Brewing Company, which was demolished in July 2022 to clear the way for Related's intended development. Progress on the project was slow-going as the developer faced escalating post-pandemic construction and capital costs and supply chain issues, ultimately leading to the Downtown Investment Authority (DIA) terminating its redevelopment agreement with Related because it failed to meet the agreement's deadlines, despite exhausting all available extensions.

Last year, however, Related returned with a revised proposal that gained the Downtown Development Review Board's (DDRB) conceptual and final approval at its April and October meetings, respectively.

At its May 15 meeting, the DIA Board unanimously backed a recommendation to approve the incentives package, setting it on track now to go before the city council.

"I know that this is a lot of money that we're going to spend, but the return on the investment to the city is far above our one-to-one ratio that we seek, at 1.13," said DIA Board Member Scott Wohlers. "The additional commitment from the Related Group to the parks is such a positive for our community on the Southbank that I'd be remiss if I didn't just mention that. So, thank you, guys, for all your hard work and dedication to bring a great deal to the Southbank in a premier location. And we look forward to seeing it come to fruition."

A staff report called Related's development proposal "much more ambitious" and "more impactful on Jacksonville's Southbank riverfront and skyline."

The current project proposal includes a 25-story high-rise featuring eight stories of a minimum of 390 residential units ranging from studios to three bedrooms. Plans also incorporate a minimum 4,000-square-foot restaurant, 1,000-square-foot Ship's Store and a nine-story parking garage with 30 public parking spaces.

Upon the project's completion, Related will deed roughly 4,200 square feet back to the city for an expansion of St. Johns River Park and Friendship Fountain and provide a dedicated easement of approximately 400 square feet for a possible fuel tank location for public boaters.

DIA's proposed incentives package includes a $19.8 million REV grant, a $39 million completion grant and a parcel valued at $5,000 for signage.

Discussions are still underway regarding potential agreements between the City and Related regarding the reconstruction of the marina that had been demolished. While bulkhead work is underway, the staff report said the City cannot enter into a new submerged land lease with the State of Florida until a new design is completed. Work on that design has not yet begun.

The new marina will feature a to-be-determined number of slips for public use to allow access to the restaurant, Riverwalk and St. John's Park, and fueling will be "brought back to the marina."

"Related remains committed to working with the City on marina design, development, and operation," the report stated.

In total, the development is estimated to cost more than $202.5 million, a drastic increase from its initial $99.2 million estimated cost.

Legacy at Risk

Jacksonville History Center releases 2024 Endangered Historic Properties list

BY MICHELE LEIVAS

The Jacksonville History Center presented its 2024 Endangered Historic Properties list at a brown bag lunch event on Wednesday, May 22 at Old St. Andrew's Church.

The annual list highlights the historic structures in Jacksonville that are at risk of being lost to the community. This year, the list consists of more than 25 structures. Jacksonville History Center CEO Alan Bliss said he was encouraged by the number of people who attended this year's lunch event, held every May in recognition of National Historic Preservation Month.

"It's encouraging, too, that this audience and the larger community seems increasingly to understand that preserving old buildings and historic sites and structures is not just about nostalgia," he said.

There are two reasons, Bliss said, for advocating to preserve these historic structures for the Jacksonville community. One is for the tangible connection they provide, serving as the bridge between the residents of today and the events and stories of the past.

"The other reason is because historic structures lend authenticity to a place and authenticity adds value," he said. "And that strengthening of authentic identity in Jacksonville is important."

While the Laura Street Trio tops the list as its "most endangered," other notable structures include nine "endangered" schools, including Atlantic Beach, West Riverside, Fishweir and Ortega elementary schools.

"Our public schools are the treasure in our community if you think about it," said Dr. Wayne Wood, who serves on the endangered sites committee responsible for creating the list. "They were built back in the teens and '20s when there were major building efforts and there was a large budget to build schools that weren't just buildings to house kids, but they were beautiful architecturally. The finest architects in our city designed them, and now they're on the verge of being thrown away."

A newcomer to the list this year is the Scottish Rite Masonic Temple on Hubbard Street, which has remained under the same ownership since it was built in the 1920s. While the building is still in use by the Masons, the building itself needs extensive repairs.

"I can't give them money," Bliss said, "But I can give them attention."

The list also includes success stories of restored, renovated and adaptively reused buildings. Some of them are familiar transformations, including the Haydon Burns Library (now the Jessie Ball duPont Center), the First National Bank (now the Cowford Chophouse) and the Seminole Club (now home to Sweet Pete's candy company and a restaurant).

Bliss said he's grateful for the Jacksonville community's "increasing interest" in the stories, events and people of its past.

"It's encouraging that people take seriously the importance of the value of historic preservation," he said. "It's important to what we do and I'm grateful for all the public support for it."

Communiqué from our Local Council Representative

On April 23rd, the Jacksonville City Council decided to approve a rezoning that allowed storage units on the Southbank, thus breaking the Downtown overlay. Having been a part of the creation of the San Marco overlay and having contributed to the Downtown overlay as well as various overlays across the Great City of Jacksonville, I have seen first-hand just how hard our communities work to establish and protect these tools that we use to preserve our neighborhoods. The disappointment and frustration across the community has reached a breaking point and I believe it's crucial that we discuss why this recent decision not only "broke the overlay" but also threatens the tools we use to protect our vibrant communities across Jacksonville.

What is an overlay?

R. Brett James, the Director of Planning and Development for the City of Jacksonville, says regarding overlays "Jacksonville's overlay districts are a special type of zoning that allows protection of the unique character of selected districts. They are developed by stakeholders of the affected area, those that live or own property and businesses within the boundary of the proposed overlay district." Jacksonville boasts 11 such overlays, including Renew Arlington, Black Hammock, Mandarin, Mayport, and other overlays each designed to protect everything from environmental resources to historical integrity. These overlays start from the ground up, crafted by those who know their communities best, based off the tailored needs of each geographical area. Planning Director James continues, saying "Countless hours are invested by the public in creating the overlay district. Subsequent changes should be processed with similar rigor and public engagement. When this fails to happen, there is risk of not meeting the intent of those with much to lose from incompatible rezonings."

Imagine driving through the historic districts of San Marco, Riverside/Avondale, or Springfield. There's an unmistakable sense of place that makes each area distinct, its architecture, its streetscape, its culture. Overlays are the unsung heroes here, working behind the scenes to ensure that as our city grows, it retains these unique characteristics that make each of these eleven overlays feel distinct and appropriate. Jacksonville is one of the fastest growing cities in the nation and is projected to increase to 1.6 million in population in the next 50 years. Now is a critical time to ensure that city growth does not result in neighborhood deconstruction and identity crises.

Why the overlays exist

In drafting the editorial, I had a conversation with Lori Boyer, Downtown Investment Authority CEO, and former District 5 Council Member. She made a comment about overlays that rang true: "Code restrictions applicable to Jacksonville in general, do not necessarily work Downtown." The success of tailored zoning practices, like overlays, is evident in Downtown, where the overlay prioritizes mixed-use development, density, and walkability, for example. Typically, these priorities are not expressed through our general zoning rules. The flexibility afforded by an overlay sparks economic development and reduces the need for cumbersome, parcel-by-parcel regulation. Rather, overlays allow an individual parcel to reach its best and higher use while maintaining continuity in a defined geographic area. This greatly influenced San Marco's past overlay efforts to address the inadequacies of a one-size-fits-all zoning approach which is especially detrimental in historic neighborhoods.

What I am proposing

The approval of a project that degrades the very essence of the Downtown Overlay is a stark reminder that our work is not done. Creating an overlay is a heavy lift for all involved and protecting it afterward is no easy task. This project, primarily intended to introduce self-storage, a use that is explicitly prohibited, flagrantly disregards the collective will of the community. To avoid future overreaches and to better protect the integrity of all our overlays, I am introducing legislation that would require a two-thirds vote from the City Council, rather than a simple majority, for any rezoning that contradicts an established overlay. This change will ensure that significant community support and council consensus are necessary before any modifications to our carefully constructed overlays are made and will also fulfill the Mayor's desire to protect the citizen inspired overlays.

These overlays are more than just effective zoning tools; they are manifestations of a community's commitment to preserving unique characteristics and solving its specific challenges.

If you support these efforts, please voice your opinion to your Council Members. Whether you live in one of our cherished historic neighborhoods, an area focused on environmental preservation, or any part of Jacksonville that values community input and integrity, this is about protecting what makes our city special.

Resident Newspaper Continues to Deliver Outstanding Journalism

The Resident newspaper is the only paper I read. I love it and thank you for sending it to me and everyone else in our neighborhoods for free. There are so many other newspapers and junk magazines that you can see are nothing but a group of advertisers pretending to be journalists. So, thank you all so much for producing a real newspaper written by real journalists and for always keeping us all connected through The Resident newspapers! I read it cover to cover and so does everyone I know! Please also continue to write about the need to save our schools – it is so important, and we need your paper as it is such a vital part of this neighborhood.

Advocate for DCPS to Reevaluate their Approach

In light of the recent school closure proposal released by Duval County Public Schools (DCPS), the consultant's recommendations have pointed our eyes in a very specific direction. We have been forced to respond accordingly. However, as a small business owner and University of Florida business school graduate, I would like to redirect our attention to the best "products" in our school district.

iPhone is one of the most successful products for Apple. Apple revolutionized the world with their little device. Accounting for 58% of the company's revenue, Apple continues to pump money into its most successful device to drive more sales.

In our area, we see 3,623 elementary school students in the Riverside High School feeder pattern. Then in middle school, our area drops to an astounding 854 middle school students. The district gets a few more students back at 1,454 in high school. DCPS sees this pattern repeatedly in every school district across Duval County.

Elementary schools are DCPS's most successful product. The current DCPS proposal has selected many of our school district's "iPhones" and chosen to end production in the interest of saving money. That is the opposite of good business sense.

If Apple was having larger financial issues within its company, the company would look at their least profitable product lines and cut them. It would be odd if Apple decided to end the production of iPhones in the interest of larger budget issues. Apple knows its financial issues will get worse when cutting its main revenue stream.

As a DCPS parent, I am one of our district's "customers". I toured public, charter, and private school options for my child. I decided upon Stockton Elementary because of its consistent record for excellence for 50 years. Those results are hard to easily replicate overnight. The district will lose the money associated with my child and numerous other parents when schools like Stockton and Fishweir are cut.

DCPS needs to send this proposal back and ask for an option more in line with common business sense. DCPS can choose to navigate this financial shortfall in a way that can lead to more money coming into the district. We can focus on middle schools and bringing students back into the district instead of closing our popular elementary schools and pushing more families to charter and private options.

It is hard to imagine a world without iPhones. It is hard to imagine a world without Stockton, without Fishweir, without all these important neighborhood schools that have a tradition of excellence and are beloved neighborhood institutions. DCPS needs to find their "iPhone schools" and stick with them.

We do not need to believe the consultant's underlying assumption that 1,200 elementary student schools will solve our financial woes. Let's follow where the students (and money) are going in our district. Study where we already have success and listen to our customers (parents) on how we can replicate that in other areas. Then we will be able to build a district that can compete with the business of charter and private schools. Or dare I say, a district that brings back the families that the "top performing public schools" in St. Johns County have attracted.

PUBLISHER'S MARGIN NOTE

While the schools impacted by the Duval County Public Schools' (DCPS) Master Facility Plan proposal within our community are primarily located in the Riverside, Avondale, Ortega, Murray Hill and Venetia neighborhoods, the editorial staff at The Resident News, believed this topic affects residents and taxpayers throughout Jacksonville.

With a new superintendent and four school board seats up for election later this year, there are many moving parts that will affect the landscape of Duval County schools. Readers are affected by the spending of tax dollars and the decisions being made that have ramifications for all taxpayers. We are sharing this news from our second paper that serves readers in Riverside, Avondale, Ortega and Murray Hill, on the other side of the St. Johns River.

As part of our continued commitment to keeping you informed, we will share stories with our readers in San Marco, San Jose and St. Nicholas that may not have an immediate impact geographically, but are of importance, nonetheless.

Ruth Jackl said the change she's seen in her grandson in the weeks since he began attending John N.C. Stockton Elementary School has been "night and day."

The family enrolled in the neighborhood elementary school in March of this year and Jackl said it would be a "tragedy" if the school should close.

"I don't see how they could even contemplate it," she said.

Jackl is just one of the many family and community members worried about the fate of the A-rated school after it was earmarked as one of the schools slated for potential closure in an updated Master Facility Plan (MFP) proposal presented to the Duval County Public Schools (DCPS) board earlier this year.

"Blueprints for Tomorrow: Strategic Adjustments for a Stronger Future" presented what DCPS Board Chair Darryl Willie said was a "very aggressive view on how to right-size a district if you were using certain parameters."

This included adjusting the boundaries of the existing feeder patterns and proposing the closures and consolidations of several schools throughout the district. In our Resident communities, the proposed high school feeder patterns are the Riverside High School and Englewood High School patterns and the proposed closures include Bayview, Fishweir, Hyde Grove, John N.C. Stockton, Ortega and West Riverside elementary schools.

Under this current proposal, students from Stockton and Ortega elementary schools would be consolidated into Venetia Elementary School while Fishweir students would consolidate into Ruth N. Upson Elementary School, and West Riverside into Central Riverside.

"[Closing Stockton] would be a major detriment to our students and to our community," said Stockton parent Lauren Agresti. "Eighty percent of this neighborhood attends Stockton and having to fold into Venetia, along with other schools...we will lose all of the things that make our school great."

DCPS held its first public forum regarding the proposal at Fletcher High School on Tuesday, May 21, and was met with a full house and 138 public speaker cards. The formal meeting began at 6 p.m. and lasted more than three hours.

During the meeting, parents and community members asked questions and shared concerns regarding what they viewed as some of the primary issues leading to this proposal and the closures therein.

Forum Feedback

Board Member Cindy Pearson said the May public forum provided the school board with several topics of high concern for parents beyond wanting to save these neighborhood schools. It also, she said, solidified the fact that charters, private schools, virtual learning, home schooling or dedicated magnets are not the only options when it comes to school choice.

"I very much like now that parents are seeing their neighborhood schools as an intentional choice that they made, and I think that needs to get out more," she said.

“ The consultant answered a lot of questions that people had about the proposal, not in a way that I think parents would be happy about. There was a very visceral reaction to things that he was explaining because they don’t align with our community. ”

- Laura Garcia

Pearson said she believes there’s still “confusion” regarding why some schools were slated for closures and others were not, and there is a larger conversation that still needs to be had surrounding a proposed closures list. The conversation about right-sizing and adjusting boundaries and feeder patterns has occurred, but that’s just “a portion of the conversation.”

"To me, it seems like we’ve had about a third of the conversation that we need to have with the other two being more clarity on the financial side and the facilities’ condition side, and the impacts of transportation. And also, do we have the right programs in the right places?" she said.

"We have not had an in-depth conversation on those other topics yet, so it’s difficult to think about, to really get a whole picture, without having that comprehensive conversation," she added.

Transportation and the impact on traffic were hot topics at May’s event, as was bus transportation and other safe routes for students who are unable to take the bus. Parents voiced concerns regarding K-8 schools and the need to preserve special programs, should a consolidation take place.

Tracy Richter is the vice president of planning services for HPM and the consultant who put together the MFP proposal. During the public forum, he provided an overview of how the proposal was formulated and answered questions from the audience.

Parent Laura Garcia said she felt parents were less than impressed with some of his responses.

"The consultant answered a lot of questions that people had about the proposal, not in a way that I think parents would be happy about," she said. "There was a very visceral reaction to things that he was explaining because they don’t align with our community."

In a May 17 interview, Willie had expressed a hope that attendance for these forums would see a “critical mass” in these early conversations surrounding the proposal.

In an interview following the forum, he said the board “appreciated” May’s attendance.

"We appreciate everyone who came out and shared their thoughts, opinions, and even strategies on how we can move forward with this process and in the plan," he said. "I think what it does is gives us an opportunity to attack the plan in different ways."

Willie said the DCPS board is in the process of finalizing the matrix it will ultimately use to “make the final decision.” That matrix, he said, should be formulated “in the next couple of weeks.”

The feedback from the forum, Willie said, allowed the board to hear from the parents on the parameters they’d like to see on that matrix and to see some potential candidates for the focus groups planned for further discussions following these public forums. These focus groups will be comprised of School Advisory Council representatives along with board-selected individuals.

"We got to hear some folks that may be really good members of that focus group," he said.

Charter Schools

The impact of charter schools on the DCPS landscape remains a top concern as they have had significant effects on both full-time enrollment (FTE) in, and funding allotted to, traditional neighborhood schools. According to DCPS, the number of charter schools in Duval County has increased nearly 35% over the last five years, from 32 in the 2019-20 school year to 43 in 2023-24.

DCPS Chief of Communications Tracy Pierce explained that school funding in the state of Florida “is directly tied to enrollment. The more students a district has, the more funding it receives.”

It is in the funding where charters have a primary impact on neighborhood schools.

Charter school enrollment has increased from fewer than 2,000 students in 2009 to more than 25,000 students today. The MFP breaks that enrollment down to 14,000 elementary-aged students; 7,300 middle school students and 4,400 high school students.

Pierce explained that both district and charter schools see capital funding (facility maintenance and improvement) from three sources: the half-penny sales tax, a local millage assessment and the Public Education Capital Outlay (PECO) Trust Fund.

A law passed during the 2020 legislative session required that, moving forward, revenue from the half-penny sales tax be shared with charter schools based on FTE. Pierce said currently, charters’ portion of that revenue is approximately 20%.

Charter schools are the sole recipients of PECO dollars. Pierce said “it has been at least five and possibly six or more years since [DCPS] received PECO.”

With several schools in his district slated for possible closure, District 7 City Councilmember Jimmy Peluso attended the public forum. In an interview following it, he said withholding those PECO dollars from traditional schools “really puts us at a disadvantage.”

"Had we had those monies available to us like we did - up until Tallahassee took it away from us - had we had those dollars available to us over the last several years, we probably wouldn’t be in the giant hole that we’re in right now," he said.

There are currently no restrictions on where a charter school can be built in relation to a traditional neighborhood school, nor are there limitations to how many charters can exist within the boundary of a particular school district. While DCPS does not have the authority to close or consolidate a charter school, it can opt to not renew a charter school’s contract if certain circumstances apply.

Those circumstances, according to DCPS, are:

- “Failure to meet generally accepted standards of fiscal management due to deteriorating financial conditions or financial emergencies;
- “Failure to participate in the state’s school accountability system or meet the requirements for student performance (Charter schools that receive two consecutive school grades of ‘F’ are automatically closed per state law; Schools receiving three consecutive school grades below ‘C’ are required to choose from one of the turnaround options listed in state law. One of the options is voluntary closure);” and
- “Material violation of law.”

In the continued discussion surrounding school choice and charter schools, there are many who advocate in favor of choice and charter. Michael Hightower, who had been part of the committee advocating for the half-cent sales tax referendum, is a strong supporter of school choice for families.

“First and foremost, you know, education is about providing the greatest opportunity and that comes

“ Education is about providing the greatest opportunity and that comes through competition, and it comes through choice. ”

- Michael Hightower through competition, and it comes through choice,” he said. “Charters give parents choice. It’s not about whether one is right or wrong or anything like that. It’s just, competition in the education system is good and it provides parents, guardians the opportunity to try and find the best option and opportunities for our children.”

Patrick Tsakalacos, head of admissions and partnerships for Brilliant Microschools, said school choice affords parents the ability to find alternative education options for their children when other school structures aren’t meeting the children’s needs.

“Maybe a child who has lots of anxiety wouldn’t be able to experience in-person setups in a traditional sense,” he said. “So we try to build their confidence, potentially going through our school might mean them rejoining an in-person, public school, perhaps. So, we kind of act as a bridge.”

“The ability for families to have a choice is kind of pivotal and paramount in eventually being able to join our online school,” he added.

The next public forum will be at the DCPS administrative headquarters June 10 at 5:30 p.m. The Resident News will continue coverage of this issue as it develops. See additional forum times under DCPS Roundup, page 12.

New Anti-Hate Bill Proposes Increased Penalties

BY MICHELE LEIVAS

A new anti-hate bill has been introduced to Jacksonville City Council proposing increased fines and penalties.

It was introduced at the end of April by City Councilmember Jimmy Peluso (District 7) and co-sponsored by Councilmembers Reggie Gaffney, Jr., Tyrona Clark-Murray, Ju'Coby Pittman, Rahman Johnson and Matt Carlucci ( Districts 8, 9, 10, 14 and At-Large Group 4, respectively).

Bill 2024-0334 proposes strengthening punishments for violations of certain city ordinances if those violations are found to be "committed with the primary purpose of expressing, or attempting to promote, animosity, hostility or malice against a person or persons or against the property of a person or persons because of race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status, national origin, age or disability" and could triple the resulting fines and penalties.

The ordinances in question pertain to noise violations, unlawful signage (to include snipe signs and projections), littering or disruption of public order.

The bill has already met some pushback from other councilmembers who argue there's already legislation on the books regarding hate crimes and worry about "unintended consequences."

“As Council President, I led the charge on legislation that stopped bad actors from using private property to display hateful and antisemitic messages. Our work in Jacksonville resulted in the Florida Legislature passing a similar bill. However, this new legislation proposed by Councilman Peluso is government overreach that would create unintended consequences.”

- Councilman Terrance Freeman

Councilmember Terrence Freeman issued a release opposing the bill on May 20, stating, "As Council President, I led the charge on legislation that stopped bad actors from using private property to display hateful and antisemitic messages. Our work in Jacksonville resulted in the Florida Legislature passing a similar bill. However, this new legislation proposed by Councilman Peluso is government overreach that would create unintended consequences."

A public meeting was held on May 22, during which council members discussed and debated the bill's potential ramifications where enforcement is concerned and what could, or could not, be deemed enforceable according to the bill's language. Another public meeting, date pending, will be held this month for further discussion.

In a May 23 interview, Peluso said people could argue existing state statute "covers us" but state statute could change.

"We've seen state statutes change quite a bit, so what's protected today can easily be removed tomorrow," he said.

His bill, he said, provides "additional teeth" for local law enforcement and adds previously "neglected" protected classes.

Responding to concerns of treading into First Amendment waters, Peluso said he is "not super concerned" as it "very much mirrors state statute currently, which we know is constitutional."

"What this does is it makes sure that if people are passing out leaflets that say, 'Kill the Jews' or 'Kill Black people,' that that's immediately reported and those individuals are penalized not just for littering, but for littering with hate speech on it," he said.

The bill must first go before the Planning Commission - as the enforcement would now be the responsibility of officers within the Municipal Code Compliance Division - before advancing through the various committees and city council.

It is expected to go before the full city council for a final vote on June 25. The Resident News will continue coverage of the matter as deliberations on the proposed legislation unfold.

DCPS Roundup: Public Forums, Board Elections, New Superintendent

BY MICHELE LEIVAS

Christopher Bernier

Six public forums remain for families to learn more about the Duval County Public Schools (DCPS) Master Facility Plan (MFP) proposal, ask questions and share feedback.

In a May 17 interview, DCPS Board Chairman Darryl Willie said the board hopes these forums will see a "critical mass" of attendance.

"We hope that we'll get a critical mass of folks there [at the forums] to not only listen but help us to kind of get a sense of how we move forward in the process," he said. "This early on, as we've mentioned a number of times, this is the very beginning of the conversation to help iterate on the plan."

Willie stressed that, at this time, no decision has been made regarding the MFP. He said the board is in the process of establishing the "matrix, [or] a rubric, so to speak" through which it can "filter every decision."

The first public forum for the MFP proposal was held on Tuesday, May 21 at Fletcher High School. The remaining six forums are scheduled as follows:

- June 10: District Administration Building (1701 Prudential Dr.)
- June 11: Stanton College Preparatory School (1149 W. 13th St.)
- June 13: Edward H. White High School (1700 Old Middleburg Rd. N.)
- June 17: Atlantic Coast High School (9735 R.G. Skinner Pkwy.)
- June 18: Paxon School for Advanced Studies (3239 Norman E. Thagard Blvd.)
- June 20: Terry Parker High School (7301 Parker School Rd.)

Doors open for these forums at 5:30 p.m. with a 30-minute reception for guests to review the feeder patterns and ask questions. The formal meeting will begin at 6 p.m. Those wishing to speak during public comment should have their speaker cards submitted by 6 p.m.

Upcoming DCPS Board Election

The pre-qualifying period for this fall's election for four DCPS Board seats (districts 1, 3, 5 and 7) has begun. A current list of active candidates for these four seats can be found at <https://www.duval elections.com/Candidates-And-Committees/Candidate/Committee-Lists-Reports-Profiles>.

The primary election for these four seats is Aug. 20 and the general election is Nov. 5. The four-year terms will begin Nov. 19.

New Superintendent Selected

DCPS selected Christopher Bernier as its new superintendent May 23.

Bernier and Daniel Smith were announced as the two finalists from a pool of six semifinalists on May 7. Bernier's experience includes, most recently, Lee County School superintendent, chief of staff for Clark County Schools in Las Vegas, and Orange County Public Schools associate superintendent in Florida, among others.

Bernier will replace Dana Kriznar as superintendent beginning July 1.

The May ribbon-cutting ceremony for the Emerald Trail's LaVilla Link saw a major turnout as city leaders, stakeholders and community members celebrated this milestone for Jacksonville.

A Step Toward Progress

First link of Emerald Trail now open in LaVilla

BY MICHELE LEIVAS

Jacksonville's dream of the Emerald Trail is one step closer to reality as the community celebrated the opening of its LaVilla Link at a ribbon-cutting ceremony on Monday, May 6.

City officials, community stakeholders and residents attended the ceremony, which included speakers Mayor Donna Deegan, City Council President Ron Salem, Groundwork Jacksonville CEO Kay Ehas, Baptist Health CEO and President Michael Mayo and Groundwork Jacksonville Board Chair Kerri Stewart.

This 1.3-mile link connects the Brooklyn neighborhood to LaVilla and the existing S-line via a vibrant, emerald-colored trail. Ehas explained that this particular link is a testament to how impactful community voices can be on projects such as this, since LaVilla was not included in the first draft for the Emerald Trail and now, she said during the ceremony, "We can't imagine the Emerald Trail without the LaVilla Link; that would have been a major, major miss."

Following the ceremony, she said the LaVilla link is "proof" that ensuring those community voices are involved and have a place at the decision-making table was the right decision.

"You're always going to have a better end product, the more people at the table, especially the people that live here," she said.

Residents will continue to see work done on this trail segment as enhancements are added, including public art, educational and directional signage, a shade structure on the Park Street overlook and the "hundreds of trees and native plants" Ehas said have been added along the trail.

The opening of this first link was a decade in the making, spanning three mayoral administrations: Alvin Brown, Lenny Curry and Donna Deegan.

In her address, Deegan called the Emerald Trail "a shining jewel" for Jacksonville.

The now-active LaVilla link, she added, will allow residents to visualize the 34-mile trail in its entirety.

"Picture a stunning greenbelt that features native plants, living shorelines and rain gardens, not to mention public art installations that celebrate each neighborhood's rich history and culture," she said. "With one fell swoop, the completed Emerald Trail will spur economic activity; it will beautify our city; it will give people an easy way to get outdoors and exercise, foster new connections and help to reduce carbon, stormwater runoff and heat island effects."

Following the press conference, guests enjoyed a trolley tour of the LaVilla link while other pedestrians and cyclists immediately headed down the trail. Members of the North Florida Bicycle Club (NFBC) came to watch the festivities and check out the new link.

Mary Glackin, a general director with NFBC, said this was "a huge step" for cyclist safety.

"[NFBC] is really dedicated to safety, biking safely. So this is a huge step in that, particularly for social riders," she said.

As more links are constructed and come online for the community to utilize, Glackin hopes this amenity will encourage more people to get out and be active while drawing more people to the city.

"I think that's exactly what we're looking for, and [it's] making Jacksonville more attractive overall for people to come into the city and participate in activities," she said.

Once completed, the Emerald Trail will connect 21 parks, 16 schools, 14 urban neighborhoods, three hospitals, two colleges and the JTA Regional Transportation Center.

Nelson Honored for Decades of Service

“Amazing Grace” leaves legacy from D.C. to Jacksonville

The Jacksonville Chapter of The Florida House on Capitol Hill hosted a fundraiser and silent auction at Baptist MD Anderson Cancer Center May 2 in honor of Grace Cavert Nelson, who was named its 2024 Florida House Vision Award winner. The evening celebrated Nelson's decades of dedication to Florida House and her hometown of Jacksonville, for which she also received the key to the city from Mayor Donna Deegan.

In addition to her advocacy work alongside her husband, Senator Bill Nelson, Grace Nelson was a former officer in the Senate Spouses' Club, met monthly with ambassadors' wives and currently serves as board secretary for the National Prayer Breakfast Foundation. During her speech, she shared her gratitude for former Florida First Lady Rhea Chiles' friendship and her work in creating our state embassy.

Silvia Pulido cooks alongside one of her grandchildren. Silvia Pulido introduces her grandchildren to her family recipes.

Major Milestone for Havana Jax

The longstanding flagship restaurant for Cuban cuisine in San Marco, Havana Jax, is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year.

"It's been an amazing journey," said owner Silvia Pulido.

Havana Jax's origin began when Pulido cooked her way through a Cuban-inspired cookbook she received from her then-husband.

"I loved to cook, so I read that book like a Bible. I learned how to do pretty much everything," said Pulido.

Pulido "parachuted" into the restaurant business when Havana Jax opened in 1994. After conquering the front-of-house, she grabbed her spoon and headed to the back.

"If I don't eat it, I cannot sell it. So that's when I got into the kitchen. That's when I fell in love with the place," she said.

"I have a lot of appreciation. I want to say 'thank you' to all the community who have supported me. I am planning to stay here for many more years, and I expect them to always come back to a place where they can eat Cuban food like any place in Havana." – Silvia Pulido

Early on, Pulido said she struggled to find the black beans, plantains and spices signature to the Cuban flavors, even putting in ingredient orders to people traveling to Miami. She loves sprinkling her Nicaraguan heritage into the family recipes served at the restaurant.

"It's all Latin American – we have the same rice, beans, the same dishes – but different flavors. I blend it to my taste," she said.

Ten years after the opening of Havana Jax, in 2004, Pulido bought the building and opened Cuba Libre Lounge. She says she has no interest in franchising. Instead, she looks to continue her "vertical" growth by expanding her catering services out of the atypically large Havana Jax kitchen.

Now, Havana Jax is a San Marco staple. Pulido has no problem finding ingredients, and she is celebrating Havana Jax's 30th anniversary with acts of gratitude toward the community that has supported her.

Havana Jax marked the start of its celebrations with a VIP party May 24. Each month, it plans to bring something different to the year-long celebration – concerts, new dishes, specials and desserts.

"I have a lot of appreciation. I want to say 'thank you' to all the community who have supported me. I am planning to stay here for many more years, and I expect them to always come back to a place where they can eat Cuban food like any place in Havana," she said.

One of LifeSouth's community blood donation buses

JFRD Wins Battle of the Badges

The Jacksonville Fire and Rescue Department (JFRD) was announced as the winner of the LifeSouth Community Blood Centers' 2024 Battle of the Badges blood drive, a competition challenging first responders across Northeast Florida to donate. Community members also donated throughout April at LifeSouth blood donor centers on behalf of either the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office or JFRD.

Dick's Wings, United Veterans Brewery and Fishweir Brewery assisted by hosting themed drives for the general public during this life-saving initiative. According to America's Blood Centers, Florida maintains only a 1- to 2-day local blood supply.

JFRD received a congratulatory plaque and one year of bragging rights for the win.

Andrew Forrester

Forrester Joins Bolles Administration

Andrew Forrester has been named the new Associate Head of School at Bolles, a role he is slated to begin in July 2024. He will replace outgoing Bolles Associate Head Mike Drew, who served for the last seven years. Forrester has had more than 24 years of experience in education, working in various positions in France and England, and multiple locations in Florida.

Bolles President and Head of School Tyler Hodges said Forrester's expertise and sense of humor made him a stand-out candidate among the nationwide applicants. In addition to his educational leadership, Forrester has experience with boarding programs, fundraising and donor cultivation.

"I'm looking forward to working with the excellent leaders at The Bolles School to continue to provide innovative, educational experiences for the students across all four campuses," said Forrester.

Women With Heart Honors Brandenburg

More than 60 attendees celebrated writer Susan D. Brandenburg at Women with Heart's "May in Margaritaville" event, held May 8 at the Alhambra Theatre. The event raised over $6,000 for beneficiary Volunteers in Medicine to help provide free healthcare for the working uninsured. In addition to Brandenburg's honor, guests enjoyed tropical-inspired cuisine and a 15-minute excerpt from the theatre's then-running show, Jimmy Buffett's Escape to Margaritaville.

Brandenburg is an award-winning biographer with more than four decades of experience writing the biographies and historical memoirs of many local luminaries and organizations. She is a member of the Florida Writer's Association and on the board for the Stetson Kennedy Foundation, National League of American Pen Women, The Carpenter's Shop Center and READ USA. She is the president of Susan the Scribe, Inc. Publishing, through which she writes and publishes a monthly children's book for READ USA called Jeremy's Journey Through Jacksonville Looking for Leaders.

Amy Palmer

Palmer to Direct Arts Grantmaking

Amy Palmer has been named program director at The Community Foundation for Northeast Florida, where she will lead Foundation-directed grantmaking in the arts and offer support to the foundation's fields of interest and staff-assisted, donor-advised grantmaking.

Previously, Palmer served as the Director of Grants Administration for the Cultural Council of Greater Jacksonville for 22 years, where she was responsible for its grantmaking programs for nonprofit organizations and individual artists, including the $7 million Cultural Service Grant Program. She also held development and communications positions at WJCT Public Media and the Museum of Science and History.

"Amy brings a wealth of expertise and experience to our team at The Community Foundation, where we greatly value thoughtful, fair grantmaking that follows the intent of donors," said Amy Crane, vice president of programs. "We couldn't be more pleased to welcome her."

Rogers Named Inaugural Development Director

Mateo Rogers joined Timucuan Parks Foundation (TPF) as the organization's first development director. With broad fundraising and donor engagement experience, he will work closely with the executive team and board of directors to continue the mission of supporting Jacksonville's expansive natural areas and landscapes.

"Mateo brings fundraising expertise to Timucuan Parks Foundation in areas where the organization needs it most," said Mayda Velez, TPF interim executive director. "His focus on enhancing accessibility, cultivating new audiences and fostering avenues for community support will not only champion the vitality and resilience of Jacksonville's wilderness parks but also enrich the lives of its residents."

A U.S. Navy veteran, Rogers has more than 10 years of experience in creating and driving strategies for operations, development, data management and community building. He studied international business at the University of North Florida, serves on the board for River City Pride and founded Stonewall Sports Jax.

Nemours Children's Health, Jacksonville

Medical Facilities Extend Research, Educational Partnership

Mayo Clinic in Florida and Nemours Children's Health, Jacksonville announced a 10-year extension of their three-decade collaboration to improve healthcare in the region and train future generations of medical professionals. It will continue to focus on medical training, research and clinical care, specifically in pediatrics, where there are significant shortages in Florida – just 83 pediatricians for every 100,000 children.

In addition to advancing scientific research, the collaboration will allow Mayo Clinic residents, fellows and staff to obtain much-needed specialty training at Nemours, including medical rotations in various pediatric subspecialties. Nemours clinical and research staff may also be considered for appointment to the faculty of Mayo Clinic College of Medicine and Science.

"This relationship has been critical for the development and expansion of the education programs at Mayo Clinic. Our medical school and many of our residency and fellowship programs would not have been possible without the training and mentorship efforts of our Nemours colleagues," said Dr. Gerardo Colon-Otero, vice dean, Mayo Clinic Alix School of Medicine. "In addition, the stem cell transplant and CAR-T cell therapy programs have been strengthened as a single Mayo Clinic-Nemours clinical and research program. We look forward to future collaborations for the benefit of the Jacksonville community."

Preservation Society Honors Beautification Efforts

The San Marco Preservation Society (SMPS) hosted its annual meeting Wednesday, May 15 to inform the community about the organization's happenings, progress, beautification efforts and initiatives, including almost 40 events over the past year.

As part of the meeting, SMPS honored and recognized those who have contributed to the area's beautification and preservation.

Winning a Beautification Award in the commercial properties division were Oceana, Syrene, Cline's, Sidecar, City Grille, Cypress Bank, Jeremiah's, Vestcor, Gemma, Blueberry Bakery and Got Flowers Jax. In the residential division, three properties were recognized: 872 Sorrento Rd., 1025 Colombo St. and 1635 Naldo Ave. Friendship Fountain and the refresh of Balis Park were honored as civic projects, and the cultural and public art honorees were Happy Brew, Lush Leaves for Quarterly Farmer's Market, and the Hearts 4 Minds mural.

San Marco resident and longtime advocate Zim Boulos also received a special recognition for his work in the neighborhood, notably for his efforts to bring sculpture and art into the public purview.

Vertacnik Wins Poetry Prize

The Episcopal School of Jacksonville held a book signing and reading April 23 for English department faculty member Peter Vertacnik's "The Nature of Things Fragile." Vertacnik won the 23rd New Criterion Poetry Prize for this debut collection in 2023, of which the book's publishing was part of his prize award from Criterion Books.

Vertacnik's poetry, translations, and criticism have appeared in 32 Poems, Bad Lilies, The Cortland Review, Hampden-Sydney Poetry Review, The Hopkins Review, Literary Matters, The New Criterion, Phoebe, Plume, The Spectator (World), THINK, and Water-Stone Review. He holds degrees in creative writing and English from The University of Florida, Texas Tech University and Penn State University.

Community Difference-Makers Honored

Laughter and support rang loudly at the City Rescue Mission's (CRM) 9th Annual Difference Makers Gala. Held Thursday, May 2 at the Southbank Hotel Jacksonville Riverwalk, the gala served as a celebration of CRM's achievements and milestones, and it recognized difference-makers who have positively impacted the community.

The 2024 Difference Makers honorees were VyStar Credit Union, Briggs Equipment, Movement Mortgage and Callahan First Baptist Church. The night also featured the comedic musings of Robert G. Lee, a 30-year stand-up comedian famous for his ad-libbed, behind-the-scenes, sitcom crowd warm-ups.

$100K Raised for Pediatric Cancer Research

The Kate Amato Foundation (KAF) raised more than $100,000 at the 5th Annual KATE KUP Triples Tennis Tournament, held April 20 at The Yards Tennis Center. All proceeds from the event benefit KAF, whose mission is to fund pediatric cancer research. The foundation has funded $575,000 in research grants toward the cause.

The family-friendly, three vs. three tournament was open to the public with over 300 participants and spectators – many in themed costumes. The 32 team slots sold out within a record-breaking 18 hours. Outside of the competition, activities included local food vendors, entertainment and a Kid Zone with face painting, balloon art, a photobooth, inflatables, crafts and games.

"We're overwhelmed by our community's continued commitment to honor Kate's life by helping other children," said Kate's parents, Jeff and Lisa Amato, in a statement. "Our favorite part of this tournament is the outpouring of love in the participants' bright smiles, warm hugs and infectious joy all day, because it shows us that Kate's spirit is alive and well within all of us."

Community Nutcracker board members presented WeCareJax with a $10,000 donation.

Community Ballet Funds Dual Nonprofits

Board members from the Community Nutcracker presented $50,000 in donations to Dreams Come True of Jacksonville and WeCareJax at the historic Florida Theatre May 21. Proceeds were raised from the 32nd annual production of The Nutcracker Ballet, which was presented in December 2023 at the Florida Theatre. This year's contribution was in memory of the late Dr. George S. Trotter, one of the founders of the Community Nutcracker and WeCareJax.

Dreams Come True received $40,000 and WeCareJax received $10,000 from the organization. With these donations, Community Nutcracker has donated over $850,000 to locally based nonprofit organizations since 1992.

Oceana owners Kiley Wynne Efron and Sam Efron celebrate the restaurant's first anniversary with staff members.

Oceana Celebrates First Year

Oceana Kitchen + Raw Bar, located at 1988 San Marco Blvd., recently celebrated its first anniversary with new offerings and plans for expanded services. Kiley Wynne Efron, who owns Oceana with husband Sam Efron, said they've received "great support and feedback" from the community surrounding the restaurant's first year in service.

Just before the one-year mark, the space launched a happy hour from 4-6 p.m. to create an opportunity for earlier diners.

"The Oceana menu is a perfect happy hour menu. It has a great vibe for that," said Wynne Efron.

After marking the occasion with a small celebration with staff, Wynne Efron said the restaurant is looking ahead to summer and fall, when they plan to launch a new website, a seasonally nuanced updated menu and its new events and catering program.

"We really designed the space for that. We designed the space so that it's a fantastic neighborhood restaurant, but it can easily be a group event space as well," she said.

The space is currently available for private events or full restaurant buyouts. Though its private dining space boasts features like soundproofing and privacy film on the glass doors to block outside views of the presentation screens, Wynne Efron said Oceana "still has that intimacy and warmth that we've become so well-known for."

"We've been an active member of the San Marco community for a long time. This anniversary has been really wonderful because we've been able to celebrate the support that this neighborhood and community has given us," she said.

Men's Garden Club Installs New Officers

Men's Garden Clubs of America have been going strong since 1932, and the Jacksonville branch – for both men and women – has been dedicated to advancing the appreciation of horticulture within our community since 1945. The club recently held its annual barbecue and officer installation at the Garden Club of Jacksonville, which included a 50-50 drawing and plant raffle.

The new officers consist of: Billy Dorsheimer, president; Dave Savage, vice president; Jim Lewis, secretary; and Courland Hunter, treasurer. New directors include Sharon Basile, Beth Heyob, Bill Huebner, Lesley Strobe and Charles Willingham. Past President Walter Bryant presented a flower to each new officer in representation of the qualities of their new position.

The club established the Riverside Park Camellia Garden in 1967 and continues to care for the 78 camellia plants across 11 beds. Members also helped organize the 1st Annual Ortega Camellia Festival in 2024, which will be presented again January 2025.

The Men's Garden Club is active in Duval County 4-H programs and supports the Jim Watson Scholarship program, Boy Scouts of America Merit Badge projects, Junior Master Gardener programs and the aloe vera plant garden at the Jacksonville Zoo.

The group meets on the first Monday of each month at the Garden Club of Jacksonville from October through May. For more information, visit mgcjax.org.

New director Sharon Basile won the Men's Garden Club plant raffle but declined to allow another member to win.

Ladies Go Bowl'd for Jacksonville

Women across Jacksonville are getting bowl'd over for sports and networking in the Bold City.

Bowl'd Ladies is a women's networking group that serves as an extension of the Bowl'd Membership, a 250-member strong group of professionals who are passionate about sports and the community and known notably for overseeing Jacksonville's annual TaxSlayer Gator Bowl game.

The first Bowl'd Ladies event was hosted in April 2021, shortly after the primarily male-dominant, membership-based group noticed a large number of women in attendance at its first post-pandemic social event.

"From that moment, it has been a wildfire of excitement and meeting new people," said Katie Cox, vice president of marketing, membership and community relations for the Gator Bowl.

The Bowl'd Ladies has grown from 15 original members to more than 60 women who are passionate about college football and the community.

"Women have this perception that we are behind closed doors talking X's and O's of play. That is the furthest thing from the truth. We, at our core, are a community organization," said Cox.

She explained that the group is "all about networking and connectedness" and does not directly fundraise, though some women are looking to establish a fundraising arm in the future. The philanthropic giving comes from Gator Bowl Charities, which is supported by the membership fees.

"I hate networking, and we created a group that doesn't feel like you're networking, but that it is generating meaningful relationships with other business owners. It's not a business card shuffle. And it's fun. It's a thing you saw on your calendar and got excited about coming versus just another thing you have to do," she said.

In addition to socials, the Bowl'd Ladies host two luncheons each year - College Football 101 and College Football 102 - to educate members on the basics of college football and how teams get to bowl tournaments, specifically, the TaxSlayer Gator Bowl.

"Of course, we talk about football because we have this marquee event to celebrate the end of the calendar year, but in large part, we just come together and connect really cool people and give back to the community," she said.

This year, the Bowl'd Ladies partnered with Jacksonville University to establish and plan for a first-time celebration of girls and women in sports, slated for spring 2025.

Member Sara Pomposo is also showing the future of women in sports as she prepares to take the reins as chairman of the Gator Bowl Sports in 2025-26, following Andrew King's 2024-25 tenure. She will be only the fourth female chairman since 2003.

Derby Day Supports Hospice Care

The Community Hospice & Palliative Care St. Augustine/St. Johns County Advisory Council hosted its 12th Annual Derby Run May 4 at The Tringali Barn in St. Augustine. Supporters celebrated in full fashion for the 150th running of the Kentucky Derby, and fundraising proceeds from the event benefited the organization's families in the St. Augustine and St. Johns County communities.

The 13th Annual Derby Run is slated for May 3, 2025.

Goodwill and philanthropy got lively during Sulzbacher's Fiesta at the Beach, May 7 at the Casa Marina Hotel in Jacksonville Beach. Celebrating 15 years at the organization's Beaches Health Center, the event's beneficiary, Fiesta at the Beach featured food, fun and live music from the Jeremiah 29 Band. Thanks to a $15,000 matching gift challenge, donations and sponsorships were tripled.

First Christian Church of the Beaches received the 2024 Healthy Hero Award for its support of Beaches Health Center, having donated $136,000 to date. Abel Harding from First Horizon Foundation also spoke about the importance of community support for providing access to healthcare for vulnerable populations.

Beaches Health Center helps homeless and disadvantaged people in the area receive the healthcare they need. Sulzbacher serves more than 7,000 people with healthcare needs annually.

Greenscape Hosts Sold-Out Root Ball

Mack and Kate Keasler

Greenscape of Jacksonville feted a sold-out crowd of supporters at its Root Ball 2024 gala. Held May 4 at The Garden Club of Jacksonville, against the backdrop of the St. Johns River, the event raised funds for the organization's programming and celebrated another successful planting season. Attendees sipped mint juleps beneath the live oaks before gathering inside to cheer for the 150th running of the Kentucky Derby.

The event, co-chaired by Sally Baker Lee and Erica Paul, also featured a Derby-inspired dinner, casino games, a silent auction and live tree decor from Liberty Landscape Supply. Root Ball is Greenscape's largest fundraiser and helps offset canopy loss.

Support for the arts was in full bloom at Cathedral Arts Project's Spring for the Arts annual fundraiser, held April 26 at Epping Forest Yacht and Country Club. The evening raised a record-breaking $820,579 in support of arts education and therapeutic programs for children and young adults. Since its inception, the event has generated nearly $9 million for the cause.

In addition to gourmet cuisine, live music, dancing and auctions, the event honored Montana as its Guardian of the First Coast for their work to safeguard the First Coast. Amy and Marisa were named honorary chairs, and Marisa was the event's emcee.

Jacksonville went from Bold City to Sin City for one night only, May 18, during the Florida Theatre's signature annual event, The Florida Theatre Ball - Vegas Style, presented by Dex Imaging. The night's starring lineup featured craft cocktails, Vegas-inspired cuisine from Well-Oiled Events, live music from The Chris Thomas Project and an auction that included a trip to the event's inspiration city, Las Vegas. Guests also experienced the thrill of a casino floor with fundraising games of craps, blackjack and roulette. The night's highlights included a proper Vegas-style wedding for Savio and Monica Valinho and nuptial renewal for Event Co-Chair Priyanka Murthy and her husband, Ragu. All proceeds from the event went to support the theatre's arts and entertainment experiences and the preservation of the historic landmark theatre.

Cowford Prepares to Give Cancer the Boot

The committee for the 2024 Cowford Ball is in full swing preparing for the 29th annual Cowford Ball, presented by Morgan and Morgan. Tickets are on sale for this Gold Rush-themed annual event, held Sept. 21 at Deerwood Castle and benefiting the Jacksonville Hope Lodge. Planned highlights include an art project, mechanical bull, live music, photos, food and drink, a live and silent auction, and a Partner Reception at the Jax Sports Car Museum.

"Together, we can make a significant impact in the fight against cancer," said event chair Laura Phillips Edgcombe. "The American Cancer Society Cowford Ball raises the critical funds necessary to advance cancer research, support patient services and raise awareness in our community. # Colonial Dames Take the Spotlight with Simultaneous Spectacles

The Florida chapter of the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America marked its 2024 annual meeting with a two-part celebration at Timuquana Country Club. Belles, Beaux & BBQ kicked off May 1 with a bar-b-cue, silent auction, mystery wine game and dancing. The event raised funds for the organization's signature Ximenez-Fatio House in St. Augustine, Florida. Ellen Stark and Allison Crisp served as the event's co-chairs. The Colonial Dames returned the next morning to hear speaker Joseph Oppermann, a noted architect, historian and restorationist, followed by a group luncheon.

A Reel Win for Tiny Hearts

More than 1,000 anglers from across Florida and the Southeast took to the St. Johns River for the three-day 35th Annual Wolfson Children's Hospital Bass Tournament, which culminated May 18. Parker Stalvey and Syler Prince won first place overall with a five-fish aggregate weight of 27.79 pounds. Second place went to the father-son team of Joe and Joey Cotromano with a total weight of 23.61 pounds, and third place went to father-daughter team Terry Mullis and Miranda Crews with 23.52 pounds.

This year's tournament raised more than $385,000 for heart surgery equipment for the C. Herman and Mary Virginia Terry Heart Institute at Wolfson Children's Hospital. More than $7 million has been raised since its inception in 1989.

The tournament is one of the largest bass fishing tournaments in the state. This year's winners took home over $48,000 in cash prizes. The 36th annual Wolfson Children's Hospital Bass Tournament is scheduled for May 15-17, 2025.

Fashion Show Supports Children's Potential

The 4th Annual Wine, Women & Shoes put its best foot forward Thursday, May 16 at Timuquana Country Club. With highlights like a fashion show and Best in Shoe contest, the event strutted its stuff to raise funds for Episcopal Children's Services, in order to create opportunities for children to achieve their full potential. The night also included a wine tasting, designer marketplace, culinary treats, an auction and mission moments.

June reminds us that nature is the ultimate artist painting the world with vibrant colors and breathtaking landscapes. - Rebecca Serle

Nowhere was this more evident than the recent display at CoRK Arts District of 140 pieces of artwork by 63 contemporary artists in celebration of Florida's flora and wild places. "Floribunda," sponsored by the Ixia Chapter of the Florida Native Plant Society, drew a huge crowd of art enthusiasts and naturalists. Ixia Chapter Director Adam Arendell said the show was a tremendous success and offered thanks to CoRK and the "wonderful" artists who participated. A portion of the sales went to help the Florida Native Plant Society with the conservation of Florida ecosystems.

Chapter President Jody Willis said, "We were excited to work with all the artists to celebrate Florida's biodiversity through their art."

Betsy Harris, Ixia Chapter vice president, celebrated the opportunity to bring "artists, art enthusiasts, environmentalists and natural history lovers together" for the festive and educational event. The event was accompanied by energetic music from DJ and exhibiting artist John Drum.

In the back gallery, Joseph Provenza's vividly colored abstract paintings with representational cultural commentary were featured.

April showers brought May flowers as Valentina Nedelcheva's "Kingdom of Flowers" exhibit adorned the second and third floors of Jacksonville's Main Library. Nedelcheva, an exhibiting artist at TAC - The Art Gallery, is known for her impasto style of painting which she creates with her fingers, palette knife and other utensils. The textural, vibrant paintings resemble thick icing.

Did you know the Main Library has docent-led tours of the current art exhibits twice a week and during Art Walk? Tours include the permanent collections of work by well-known artists Memphis Wood, Jerry Uelsmann, Augusta Savage, Lee Adams, and others. Go to jaxpubliclibrary.libret.info for tour times.

Southlight Gallery had a great representation during Art Walk. The gallery at 1 Independent Dr. has a lineup of award-winning artists and is open from 5-8 p.m. during Art Walk. Check out southlightgallery.com for hours and upcoming shows.

The Florida Mining Gallery at 2756 Park St. (formerly Pedestrian Gallery) now has its sign up, contemporary artwork displayed, and more to come. Receptions will begin in the fall. In the meantime, contact them for private showings at floridamininggallery.com.

The 22nd season of the Prelude Chamber Music Camp and Festival starts June 17 with daily concerts at noon at Riverside Park United Methodist Church. Their finale concert is June 22 at 11 am. Contact jjmajors12@gmail.com for more info.

June is busting out all over! Pick up the rhythm of life and chase' into summer with a poem, a song, a vision of beauty and joy inspired by the arts in your mind and in your heart.

This edition of the Artbeat column pays tribute to the talented local artist who shared his cartoons and artwork with The Resident News for the past 17 years. Ed, the artist who designed the column's logo, has sadly passed away, leaving a void in our Resident News family and the wider community. He will be deeply missed.

Yellowcard performed at a Jacksonville skate park in 2001 with Cooke (far left) playing bass.

WARREN COOKE

BY LAURA PHELPS

Warren Cooke had no idea that a playful comment he made to his dad in 1997 foreshadowed his future life as a rock star. But that's exactly what happened.

Cooke moved with his family from Tampa to Jacksonville that year to attend Douglas Anderson School of the Arts (DA).

"If I'm going to go to an art school, I'm going to put together a band," Cooke told his dad, partly joking. Though his father grew up in the Ortega area, Cooke was brand new in town and knew no one.

Whether it was fate or serendipity, Cooke met guitarist Ben Harper in the cafeteria on his second day at DA. That same day the two connected with drummer Longineu Parsons, a former DA student who had been touring internationally with his father – a world-famous jazz trumpet player.

"It started with Ben Harper, Longineu Parsons and I playing in Ben's bedroom in his mom's house," Cooke said.

They named the band Yellowcard – a soccer penalty and inside joke the teenage punk rockers used at parties.

Adding guitarist Todd Clary and lead singer Ben Dobson, the band adopted a hardcore punk style. They found their signature sound after adding fellow DA student Sean Mackin, a violinist.

But after two years of performing locally, the band struggled to break through in Jacksonville, and some band members left to pursue other projects. With a new lead singer (Ryan Key, also a DA grad), the band members decided to move to Los Angeles.

"I think all of our parents were like, 'What the hell are you guys doing?' But we saw a vision. We saw other bands that were starting to break through, and we knew with our background and training, if we put the time into it, we had a shot," Cooke said. And he was right.

In California, Yellowcard signed with a small label, released their first full-length album, One for the Kids, and went on a national tour. Audiences grew at each show as the tour went on.

"We became known as the pop-punk band that had a violinist and also did backflips on stage, whatever we could do to get people to remember us," Cooke said.

When the band signed with Capitol Records, their ascent to fame accelerated. Cooke remembers performing at the Olympics Opening Ceremony in Salt Lake City, Utah, in front of thousands of people.

"That was the height of success for me," Cooke said, but it would be short-lived for him.

The band began working on its next album, Ocean Avenue, and Cooke disagreed with the stylistic changes record label executives wanted to make. He decided to leave the band in 2002, just before Ocean Avenue was released. The album reached number 23 on the US Billboard 200 and was certified platinum in the US.

"Some would say I did all the hard legwork and then left right before the payoff," Cooke joked. "But for me, it was an amazing experience. I was in the band for five or six years, got to travel, got to play some amazing shows."

Cooke moved back to Jacksonville and became a fill-in bassist for nationally touring bands. He married, had kids and settled into steady work.

"Over the last 20 years, I've moved away from Jacksonville a couple times, and I've always come back here. I love Jacksonville; I think it's an amazing community. It's a great city with a lot of opportunity, and it's constantly expanding," he said.

Cooke also found a new passion: teaching.

"I started teaching piano, bass, guitar, even some ukulele," he said. "It's inspiring to watch somebody all of a sudden become passionate about an instrument when you just show them a couple little tricks of the trade. To me that's worth more than any amount of money because it's passing on knowledge."

While Cooke once taught private lessons full-time, today he focuses on just a handful of students and enjoys songwriting with some of them.

"I have two students right now that are really, really good at it. One of them is a bass player named Sophia. And she is really good at writing bass lines to chords. It's just a way to teach them how to be creative," Cooke said.

Cooke still performs (and probably always will). He plays in two cover bands and an original punk band called Flag On Fire. With a life that is filled with music, family and purpose, he has no regrets. And he hopes his story inspires and encourages young musicians who dream of making it big someday.

"It's just awesome to show them that it's possible. I remember when I was 13 or 14, and I first started taking guitar lessons, and people would say, 'Oh, you're never going to make it, you know, there's only one out of a million people that ever make it in the music business.' So, now I can say to kids, 'Hey, if I can do it, you can do it.'"

“ Over the last 20 years, I've moved away from Jacksonville a couple times, and I've always come back here. I love Jacksonville; I think it's an amazing community.

It's a great city with a lot of opportunity, and it's constantly expanding. ”

If I couldn't see or smell, I would know I was home in our Resident Community because of the sounds we get to process around here daily. For better or worse (depending on the noisemaker), everyday auditory experiences really define our neighborhoods – they set us apart from other less hopping, more humdrum areas of town. Let's be grateful for these familiar echoes, even the grating ones! Hear me out on why it should all be music to our ears.

Each morning at 7 a.m., just before the roar of landscapers' blowers rouses all sleeping neighbors, most of us are privileged to hear the distant wail of Big Jim, the large copper steam whistle affixed to the roof of JEA's Main Street building in downtown Jacksonville. Like clockwork, Big Jim signals to the surrounding community that it is 7 a.m. (time to get your butt out of bed), noon (time to grab lunch), 1 p.m. (time to get back to the grindstone) and 5 p.m. (quittin' time). This is a sensible routine, one to which we are all so fortunate to align our lives. Big Jim makes sure we all just keep it simple and stick to the basics of the day. And I love how Big Jim has been a constant in our shared history. According to an old JEA release, the whistle has been keeping us on track since 1985, when the city opened the JEA plant near Springfield. "The 32-inch copper steam whistle began marking the key times of the workday with few interruptions since. It also warned residents of the Great Fire of 1901 and signaled important historic events, such as the end of two world wars. It marked the arrival of electricity and each New Year's Day since 1896." What an honor to live in our neighborhoods and continue this tradition! Not everyone in Northeast Florida can do so.

I mentioned the blowers earlier. This is not one of my favorite neighborhood noises. And unlike the blow of Big Jim, landscape company blowers have no history, tradition or schedule, nor are they unique to our neighborhoods. But I cannot reflect on daily neighborhood sounds without wincing over and acknowledging their ear-bleeding existence. The only redeeming quality about this noise to me, personally, would be if it was OUR yard maintenance crew causing all the ruckus. But it NEVER IS. Our landscaper rarely shows up. Thus the rooty, dollar-weedy blanket of long, crunchy grass. SMH.

The other morning cacophony that gets the neighborhood going is the sound of waste management and recycling trucks. I don't mind these noises. To me, it is the sound of progress – that we are all working together to purge, lessen and banish the trash from our lives. That metal-grating discord also makes me feel extremely grateful for the men and women who work in waste removal. It's one of the most important and difficult jobs out there, in my opinion. These folks must wake up very early, get in big, smelly trucks and cart away all of the unwanted crap we discard. And to boot, they are really gracious people. The other day, the bestie and I were on a walk, and I guess looking exhausted or worried or just plain pitiful, and one of the garbage truck drivers waved and offered us two bottles of water. I mean, how generous and loving – and embarrassing that I must look like death during my morning walks. I'll take it, though. This noise is fine by me.

Once I'm up and at 'em and doing my thing in the neighborhood, another familiar noise is the reverberating bellow of trains crossing many of our area streets and the St. Johns River bridge, of course. A more negative person – like the riled she-elf who informs many conversations in my head – would say these sounds really suck. Train whistles prophesy a painful car wait, usually when you're late for something important. Train whistles also can be scary when you're playing pickleball at the Southside Tennis Complex or elsewhere. Train whistles always come at the worst possible times and can be heard in the wee hours of the morning, long before Big Jim and the leaf blowers begin their daily howl. But here's the thing – the good thing – about trains' excruciating blasts. They indicate we live in a thriving community that is based on and has a future in logistics and transportation. Jacksonville is the Main and Main, coast-to-coast, north-to-south vortex of the commerce world. It all begins and ends in Jacksonville, Florida, and I don't think we want it any other way. Transportation is the foundation of our prosperity here. So, let's just do our best to accept that and use those long wait times at the railroad crossing to be productive and positive – redefine the wait as prayer time, or a 20-minute reflection, meditation or moment to call an old friend and reconnect. As god-awful as those blasts are, train noises are actually really good for us.

On the same note, so are the bells and ding-ding-dings we hear when one of our neighborhood draw bridges goes up so boats – and trains – can pass. A ding-ding-ding is, of course, much more tolerable than a whoooooo-whooooo(!!!) but it can cause the same grief – the kind that makes my inner-elf roll her eyes and slap the steering wheel. But again, we are privileged to witness healthy commerce and seafaring enjoyment from the front row. These sounds are ours to embrace. No other neighborhoods in Northeast Florida get to experience the city's strengths in this way.

Now that we're talking about planes, trains and automobiles, let's address the planes-and-helicopters part of the neighborhood sound equation. When I worked at The Bolles School, NAS Jax planes – the big ones – were a common and most impressive commotion. They would fly low, directly over Bolles Hall and across the St. Johns River, multiple times throughout each day. It was the same – and even more fun – when the Blue Angels were practicing for an upcoming air show. And then there are the sounds of helicopters from Mayport Naval Air Station making their way downtown and following the bends of the St. Johns River. These are the sounds of freedom, y'all! I have never minded hearing these tones.

And let's talk about the sounds of impending imprisonment. Yes, Jacksonville Sheriff's Office helicopters often fly low and loud over our neighborhoods. They make me wonder if someone's hiding in my backyard or if I need to go lock a few extra doors and windows. Yes, these noises are disconcerting. But does Nocatee get this kind of crime-drama excitement? No, it does not. Boring as heck. We are fortunate to live in a neighborhood that has a flash of gritty flair from time to time.

It's a good thing that we have church bells to remind us of all the good in our midst, and that God is in charge. Aren't chimes so soothing? I love hearing them. A friend who lived very near a chiming church was not always happy to hear them, as bells can be loud and unnerving if you're trying to work or talk to someone. But let's be real; church bells remind us that we are a village, just like the old days when church bells signaled the time and called folks to worship.

As night comes, I know it's been a really great day in the neighborhood when I hear owls and foxes screeching at the moon and into the beautiful wild that surrounds us. I am grateful to be reminded of our place in a connected universe.

Jacksonville Gallops into Action with American Wild Mustangs

BY JULIE KERNS GARMENDIA

Wild mustangs still freely roam on U.S. public rangelands. Yet, readers may be unaware that these living symbols of America's rich, Western pioneer and frontier history also live around Jacksonville. They were obtained through a U.S. Bureau of Land Management (BLM) federal program that manages wild herds. Wild mustangs and burros (or donkeys) are defined by federal law as unbranded, unclaimed, free-roaming animals found on U.S. public lands. The BLM regularly rounds up these excess animals for immediate sale or adoption.

Wild mustangs and burros only survive today because Congress passed the 1959 Public Law 86-234, known as the Wild Horse Annie Act, and the 1971 Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act. Before those laws, they were routinely captured on public, state and private lands by ranchers or "mustangers" for sale or shipment to commercial slaughterhouses for pet food. They were also shot and poisoned by ranchers, hunters and landowners who considered them pests competing for water and vegetation.

In 1950, Velma Johnston was a Nevada secretary driving to work behind a truck overloaded with visibly wounded mustangs. Horrified, she documented that mustangs were commercially harvested, rounded up and sold to slaughterhouses for 6 ½ cents per pound, regardless of injuries or suffering. Alive and mobile were the only requirements for sale.

"Wild Horse Annie," as Johnston became known, launched a national publicity campaign, successfully mobilizing students across America to flood Congressional members with letters demanding federal protection for mustangs and laws banning inhumane treatment. The Wild Horse Annie Act was the first federal law to prohibit using aircraft or vehicles to capture or kill mustangs or poisoning water holes on federal land. Later, the Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act prohibited the capture, injury or disturbance of free-roaming mustangs and burros on federal land.

Those familiar with mustangs say they differ from domestic horses. Mustangs are curious, sensitive and hyper-wary with a sixth sense for danger – necessary for survival in their open-range homelands.

The late Florida horsewoman/trainer Ashley Rose Stevenson, who founded Downtown Mustangs Florida Adoptions and saved thousands of mustangs, said, "Mustangs are like ninjas. They can see, hear and smell danger miles away and are the best trail horses, quiet as can be."

Mustangs are also highly prized for their unusually robust health and sound feet, strength, sure-footedness and adaptability. Their athleticism, intelligence, trainability and quick learning distinguish them in pleasure riding or competition: barrels, dressage, reining, jumper, endurance, cross country, drill team, mounted shooting, Western or English riding and all-breed horse shows. They also successfully work in therapeutic equestrian programs.

"My friend, Barb, volunteered there, had horses and got me riding. It felt completely natural from the start," Flynn said. "I adopted an older, rescue quarter horse, Aspen, and then bought Serah, a Morgan, who helped me win my first barrel race. Barb and her husband had adopted a BLM mustang; that's how I first Mustang Leo's story is unique compared to typical mustang owners. Flynn did not grow up in a saddle and boots but learned to ride as an adult. A corporate sales executive, she traveled between Miami and Atlanta, far from the equestrian life, until hers took a painful turn.

In 2018, Flynn's husband, Steve, 30, died, leaving her grief-stricken. A lifelong animal rescuer and shelter volunteer, she was a Friends of Jacksonville Animals board member. Flynn began volunteering learned about mustangs."

In May 2022, Flynn heard that County Line Equine Rescue had adoptable BLM mustangs. There, she saw a Nevada mustang, Leo, 5. It was love at first sight.

"I knew as soon as I saw him; what a beauty!" Flynn said. "He's so smart, he unlatches doors and lets the other horses out. If anything is scary, Leo is the brave one who investigates," Flynn said.

Already boarding two horses, Flynn adopted Leo, sold her home, bought property and grew her herd to six horses, five rescue dogs, emus, alpacas, goats and pigs. She is now happily engaged to Shane Tedder.

Seth Samples and Lincoln

Unlike Flynn, Seth Samples was born a cowboy, but horses, especially mustangs, changed his life, too. A former rodeo and competition-professional-turned-renowned-horse-whisperer, Samples says his greatest life lessons came from mustangs.

Samples can ride a wild mustang within a few hours, and he proved that by winning many rodeos, mustang-breaking and colt-starting competitions, despite the danger to himself and the horses. However, he no longer believes in timed competitions or the win-at-all-costs mentality for himself or his horses. His attitude toward training dramatically changed as he saw successful, more humane methods emerge and experienced his own personal trials.

In addition to training horses – without rigid deadlines or unrealistic goals – Samples helps manage 15,000 cattle within two hours of Jacksonville. He speaks reverently of famous horseman Dan “Buck” Brannaman, the trainer who inspired Nicholas Evans’ bestselling novel and 1998 hit movie, The Horse Whisperer. Brannaman still practices and teaches his gentle training methods, which are based on understanding how horses think and communicate and the critical difference that building a deep bond between horse and rider can make.

“While a horse is with me, no matter what situation it comes from, it is going to spend the best hours and days of its life,” Samples said.

On a sunny morning at his ranch, Samples introduced Lincoln, a muscular, shining copper-colored Nebraska mustang, who stood perfectly still and relaxed, as indicated by his slightly lifted back hoof. Lincoln listened intently, ears pointed toward Samples. His weathered hands groomed Lincoln’s mane as he told the story of this special mustang.

“In 2023, my friend asked me to train his wife’s BLM wild mustang. Lincoln was a real looker...coat shines like a new, copper penny in the sun,” he said. “It took a few weeks until he came close, but I never touched him. I was waiting for him to tell me he was ready. My grandson touched him first when Lincoln was following him around. I told [my grandson] Bryar to just reach his hand back and let Lincoln nuzzle him. The horse did, and that was a moment.”

Samples said it’s a considerable responsibility to train a client’s horse, but a mustang even more so because they can be dangerous and unpredictable. Removing a mustang’s fear of anything touching or being on their back is “such a big deal.” After six months of patiently working with him, Samples thought Lincoln was ready for more contact. The day Samples raised his torso onto the horse’s back, his boot awkwardly caught Lincoln’s side, spooking him.

“He reacted just like a mountain lion was on him. He whipped around and bit my leg so hard. If not for my thick leather boots, he would have ripped out my entire calf,” Samples said.

The disappointing setback meant weeks of starting over from the beginning to regain Lincoln’s trust. One day, Samples looked over and saw owners’ daughter, Peyton Norman, 13, next to Lincoln’s flank, calmly scratching his belly.

“I about had a heart attack, but that little girl had no fear of him, and Lincoln knew it,” Samples said. “He was totally free and relaxed, enjoying her attention. I slowly walked over and put Peyton up on him, then my grandsons, Bryar and Aaron. He was fine with the kids, dragging his lead rope around. Then he accepted their smaller saddles; they all rode him. In six months, I rode him. Now, Peyton rides Lincoln bareback.”

Do you love black labs?

Meet Oliver. He cannot wait to meet his lab person! This ACPS superstar, mixed-breed lab is currently with a foster and looking for his forever home. Oliver, 6, weighs 85 pounds with a silky black coat and brown eyes. He is fully vetted, neutered, vaccinated, heartworm-negative, perfectly housebroken and high-energy, but does not bark, jump or act destructive. Oliver loves people, children and is dog-friendly. He lives to retrieve his Kong balls, is affectionate and bonds quickly. Oliver knows basic commands, is obedient and does not shed. Email Julie@residentnews.net for information or to arrange to meet this wonderful dog.

Looking for a different animal to call your own?

ACPS, along with 18 other shelter and adoption agencies, are participating in the Petco Love Statewide Mega Adoption Event, where hundreds of dogs and cats will be available for adoption. All pets are spayed/neutered, microchipped and vaccinated.

Thank you to everyone who joined us at our Armed Forces Military Gala. It was a fantastic event, drawing a distinguished crowd to celebrate it. The highlight of the evening was unveiling the newly named Five Star Veterans Center Col. and Suzie Loving Complex. This dedication honors the contributions of Col. Len Loving and his wife, Suzie, to the veteran community. In addition to the facility's naming, the Board of Directors, led by Mike Hightower, announced the creation of a new scholarship under Col. Len Loving's name. This scholarship will be awarded to individuals who journey from the battlefield to the classroom and beyond. It aims to recognize those who inspire others with their perseverance and passion. Five Star Veterans Center Col and Suzie Loving Complex's mission is to provide displaced military veterans the safe housing and the supportive services they need to successfully transition to living independently in a place they call home.

To donate, please go to our website 5starveteranscenter.org or tour the center, and call 904.723.5950 on how you can help us with this life-saving mission.

Navigating Private School Costs: A Guide by Walsh Investment Consulting Group

Unlocking the Power of 529 Plans and UTMA Accounts

As a high-net-worth family, you understand the importance of providing quality education for your loved ones. The Walsh Investment Consulting Group recognizes this commitment and offers tailored strategies to help you navigate the complex landscape of private, Catholic, or other religious schooling expenses. Let's explore how our expertise can benefit your family and possibly save you thousands in taxes.

529 Plans: A Smart Choice for Education Funding

1. What are 529 Plans?

- 529 plans are tax-advantaged accounts designed specifically for education savings.
- Administered at the state level, these plans allow you to invest and grow your funds while enjoying tax benefits. The availability of such tax or other benefits may be conditioned on meeting certain requirements.

2. Recent Changes: K-12 Tuition Eligibility

- Thanks to the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (effective January 1, 2018), 529 plans now cover K-12 tuition expenses.
- Families can withdraw up to $10,000 per year per beneficiary to pay for private elementary and secondary school tuition.

3. Recent Changes: Roth IRA Conversion

- Starting in 2024, if there is any money leftover, 529 account holders can transfer up to a lifetime limit of $35,000 from a 529 plan to a Roth IRA for a beneficiary. This rule helps 529 plan owners avoid taxes and penalties for nonqualified withdrawals. It's especially useful for funding a Roth in high-income years. The 529 account must have been open for more than 15 years, and the funds cannot be rolled into a Roth IRA until 5 years after the funds were contributed or earned. Participants are subject to annual Roth IRA contribution limits and must have earned income at least equal to the amount of the rollover.

4. Maximizing 529 Plan Benefits

- We guide you in selecting the right 529 plan, considering state-specific advantages.
- Our experts help optimize contributions and withdrawals to minimize taxes.

UTMA (Uniform Transfers to Minors Act) Accounts: An Alternative Approach

1. What is an UTMA Account?

- UTMA accounts allow you to transfer assets to a minor (your child or grandchild) while maintaining control until they reach the age of majority (usually 18 or 21, depending on the state).
- Unlike 529 plans, UTMA accounts are not limited to education expenses. They can fund various needs, including private school tuition.

2. Tax Implications

- UTMA accounts offer tax advantages similar to 529 plans but not as powerful.
- However, withdrawals from UTMA accounts are not restricted to educational expenses, so more flexible.
- Be aware that once the minor reaches the age of majority, they gain full control over the account. Of course, the account will be long gone paying for education before that ever happens.

Investing in Your Taxable Accounts for Schooling: An Alternative Approach

1. You pay taxes on every dollar earned? Why are you still doing this?
2. Make the change to tax efficiency.
3. Ask us how to make the change. (904) 839-2891

Walsh Investment Consulting Group: Your Partner in Education Planning

1. Customized Strategies

- Our team assesses your unique financial situation, goals, and family dynamics.
- We create personalized plans that align with your values and aspirations.

2. Holistic Approach

- Beyond 529 plans and UTMA accounts, we explore other investment vehicles.
- Our goal is to create a comprehensive education funding strategy.

3. Legacy Planning

- Walsh Investment Consulting Group assists in multigenerational planning.
- We help grandparents contribute to 529 & UTMA accounts, ensuring a lasting educational legacy.

Conclusion: Investing in Education, Securing the Future

Education is an investment that pays dividends for generations. The Walsh Investment Consulting Group stands ready to guide your family toward smart choices, whether it's funding private, Catholic, or religious schooling. Let us help you build a brighter future for your loved ones.

Remember, each family's situation is unique. Consult with our experts to tailor these strategies to your specific needs. Contact us today to embark on your educational journey with confidence!

Syrian-American Artist Mentors Students

Syrian-American artist Dima Kroma visited the Bolles Upper School San Jose Campus

April 22 to speak with art students from teacher Tiffany Gonzalez's classes.

Kroma discussed Islamic art and why she utilizes it in her works, noting her personal connection to the style. Afterward, she spent time mentoring two upper school students with whom she shares cultural connections. Senior Tammy Yazgi received feedback from Kroma on her pieces exploring the trauma of the Syrian War. Kroma also spent time with Nora Bouziane, who uses Arabic text with Islamic and Moroccan influences in her 3D art.

"Dima encouraged the students to continue leaning into heritage, research and personal meaning, remarking that it is exciting and encouraging to see relatable cultural expressions on display in Gooding Gallery," Gonzalez said.

Kroma recently completed her MFA at Jacksonville University, and her thesis show is on display in the Florida State College of Jacksonville Baymeadows Gallery. She is the youth and family programs manager at The Cummer Museum of Art & Gardens.

Climbing Wall Helps Five Rise to Eagle Scout

Five Bishop Kenny High School students representing four Scout troops throughout Jacksonville achieved the rank of Eagle Scout, scouting's highest honor: Nick Martin, Keegan Gallup, Kolbe Sexton, Brody Cooper and Zach Crutchfield.

One of the main pillars of attaining the rank of Eagle Scout is the planning, development and completion of a significant service project. This year, the young men built projects ranging from butterfly and rock gardens to benches and picnic tables. The largest project involved installing a 20-by-8 adaptive climbing wall in a specially designed classroom that will be used by more than 75 elementary students.

The materials were funded through donations and the labor was provided by the young men as part of their service project. Additional support came from Assumption, Resurrection, and St. John the Baptist Catholic Churches, Neptune Beach Elementary School and the Italian American Society.

Platt Places Second at International Science Fair

Episcopal School of Jacksonville (ESJ) senior Anabella Platt won second place in the Earth and Environmental Science category at the Regeneron International Science and Engineering Fair in Los Angeles the week of May 13 for her investigation of hemp-based artificial coral reefs as a biodegradable solution to marine restoration. The award included a $2,000 check. ESJ junior Alex Chindris was also a finalist at the competition, which included more than 1,600 students from 65 countries. The students presented their projects, attended panel discussions with Nobel Laureates and networked with the next generation of researchers and engineers.

Charity, Pros Uplift Youth Baseball

In partnership with The Players Alliance and Florida State College at Jacksonville (FSCJ), Walk Off Charities hosted a Spring Baseball Celebration Weekend April 27-28 on the FSCJ campus. The event supported its mission to provide underserved youth with opportunities, resources and access to the game of baseball. Its Spring League Opening Day Celebration, the largest program to date, featured more than 600 players across 63 teams.

"We are very excited about the growth of our programs throughout the year. Through partnerships with groups like The Players Alliance, we are able to impact our coaches and community that much more," said Jarrod Simmons, executive director at Walk Off Charities.

The weekend also included The Players Alliance Coaches Intensive, led by former Major League Baseball players Marquis Grissom, Lou Collier, Marvin Freeman and Lenny Webster. Following the Coaches Intensive was an open workout for the Walk Off Charities Scout Team, formed for minority high school level players to showcase their skills with the hopes of earning college scholarships or pro scouts' attention.

FSCJ baseball Head Coach Brad Frick said, "The kids in the spring leagues are future leaders, students and college baseball players. Supporting them now is setting them up for success in the future."

Angels for Allison Shines in Dark Times

The Allison Brundick Haramis Foundation, also known as Angels for Allison, is marking its 15th anniversary in 2024. Since its inception, it has supported 1,000 families and given $1 million toward funeral costs for families who have lost a child. The Foundation helped seven families in its first year, a number that has grown to 175 annually as of last year.

"Unfortunately, the need for our services will never go away, and this need continues to grow exponentially each year. If Angels for Allison did not exist, these families would not have another resource in their darkest time. We want to build awareness and broaden our community of supporters beyond our strong and dedicated roots in order to sustain and serve families in need in Northeast Florida," said Executive Director Anne Marie Van Wie.

The organization was founded by Lee and Drew Haramis after the loss of their daughter, Allison. It raises funds for community funeral services through annual gala and luncheon events, as well as the sale of painted angels, which it also gives to families in honor of their lost child. It also recently established a new Angel Partner Program, where companies and individuals support the organization through an annual sponsorship. Constellation FURYK & FRIENDS presented by Circle K is the first organization to join the program.

Its annual gala, Flight of Fancy, will be held Nov. 8 at the Garden Club of Jacksonville.

Schools Collaborate for Student Songwriters, Musicians

Songwriting student Sam Rajashekar visits Dolphinium Records.

Douglas Anderson School of the Arts (DA) and Jacksonville University's (JU) recording label, Dolphinium Records, announced a partnership aimed at nurturing budding songwriters and enhancing music education. Under the guidance of DA teacher John Citrone, students can now gain hands-on experience in contemporary pop songwriting and professional recording at Dolphinium Records.

"This partnership with Dolphinium Records has allowed our students to immerse themselves in the music industry, learning from professionals and gaining practical experience in a professional recording studio," said Citrone.

Dolphinium Records is a student-run, campus-based record label for JU with a rich history dating back to at least 1968-69. It offers students at JU a range of opportunities to explore music production, sound design and live sound.

"Our collaboration with DA represents a shared commitment to nurturing the next generation of musical talent," said Jason Perry, JU songwriting professor and faculty advisor of Dolphinium Records. "This partnership aims to provide students with the resources and support they need to succeed in the music industry."

Looking ahead, Perry envisions expanded collaborations, including joint recording projects and live performances featuring students from both institutions.

"The best way to get an artist's music out there [is to] play it live," Perry said. "People still enjoy live music, and the talent coming out of DA is worth checking out!"

Students Opt for Immersive Summers

Ten Bolles students have opted to participate in immersive international summer programs through Children's International Summer Villages (CISV). The students, ranging from fifth to 11th grade, will travel to various destinations across the U.S., Europe and Asia for international leadership programs.

Alex Meyers, Laya Pakala and Karsyn Wilkins will attend international youth meetings held in Turkey, Pennsylvania and Norway with youth from eight countries. Kaia Roychowdhury will participate in an exchange program with another Italian student. Olivia Bassin will attend a three-week camp in Sweden, along with groups from 10 other countries. Sahana Gummadi will serve as a junior counselor at a month-long "Village" camp in South Korea, where she will help lead activities for 11-year-olds from 12 other countries.

Exchange Club Awards Student Scholars

The Exchange Club of Jacksonville announced the recipients of its 2024 youth awards, selected from roughly 200 applicants throughout Duval County. University Christian School senior Cody Chen was awarded the club's Male Student of the Year award, and Mary Clare Stinneford, senior at Bishop Kenny High School (BK), was selected as the Female Student of the Year. Both received a scholarship check for $2,000 and advanced to represent the club at the State District Convention May 18, where Stinneford won an additional $2,500.

"It was such a touching moment to see the surprised look on their faces and the joy and pride in their parents' eyes. Moments like this that make me proud to be a part of the Exchange Club - our youth, community and a great country is what it is all about!" said Exchange Club 2023-24 President Jennifer Johnson.

THE WAY WE WERE

Richard McGee

BY JENNIFER JENSEN

Richard McGee has always been an avid outdoorsman and an artistic creator. More than 15 years ago, he decided to combine the two and took up painting as a hobby.

"I've always been able to sketch and draw," he said.

McGee has spent most of his life hunting and fishing, so he chooses wildlife scenes, images and landscapes he has encountered throughout the years as subjects for his artwork.

"I've spent way too much time in the woods and the water," he said. "I like to paint things that I remember and things that have impressed me."

He set up a small studio with "good outdoor light" in the spare bedroom of the home he shares with his wife of 40-plus years, Noni.

As a child, McGee would sit in class and draw little sketches. As an adult, he used that skill in his

"A scene that is still strong in my memory...it satisfies me to see it and reproduce it on canvas. It's almost like getting to relive it a little bit," said McGee. "If I'm trying to draw something realistic, I want to make sure that it is real. I'm not too picky, but if I'm making a bird, the bird's got to look like an actual bird."

He'll even research the colors of the feathers of a particular bird, or other tiny details, and has been known to start over if he isn't happy with the direction a painting is going.

"If he's not happy with it, he'll just take white paint and cover it, and just completely restart," Noni McGee said.

He's also been known to remove a finished painting from the wall when he spies something that might need fixing. "I'll look at it, and months later, I'll take it down and make changes," Richard McGee said.

If he's painting a log or string of moss, McGee said it needs to look interesting and attractive.

"It seems silly, but I like to remember what an old log looks like, what certain leaves look like on an old cypress tree," McGee said. "I have an ability, I guess, stationed at NAS Jax. He spent much of his childhood hunting and fishing with his father, who taught him most of what he knows about the outdoors, which he passed on to his two stepsons, Tom and Frank.

"Tom is a carbon copy of him," Noni McGee said. "He adored everything he did and mimicked him."

McGee's hunting and creativity also led him to create a duck decoy - which was then manufactured into a plastic duck.

"They made a mold out of his carving because they were so accurate," Noni McGee said. "And people love them."

The Wingsetter decoys were produced in the '70s, though one can still find them in vintage shops or on eBay.

While hunting and fishing may have taken up "too much" of his time over the years, McGee said that if he were to start a career today, he would enjoy being involved in the production of an outdoor TV show. But for now, he'll have to settle on being famous instead for his art. Noni McGee said his paintings have become so popular at the Crab Festival in Steinhatchee, Florida, that people recognize him on the street.

"He's quite famous in Steinhatchee," she said. "They all know him in the restaurant."

He's also won several awards for painting, including first place at the "In Flight" show at the Art Center Cooperative Inc.

While he is starting to slow down with his paintings, he's got quite a stash he would love to pass to someone else.

"It is my hope that those who view my work will agree that my subjects and themes are worthy of my creative efforts and enjoy my interpretation of that which has inspired me," he said.

advertising business, designing brochures and logos. His art talents proved critical then, as their business pre-dated computers and the design software that came with them.

When he retired, he "couldn't sit still" and needed projects. Oil painting became the answer. When he paints, he begins with a pencil sketch of the image, sometimes projecting that image to a full-size canvas to outline and paint. He tries to make his painting look as realistic as possible, especially if it features wildlife.

to remember what they look like."

As for the men featured in his paintings, one might notice they all bear a striking resemblance to the artist himself. That's because they are. Noni McGee often takes photos of him in the poses he wishes to paint.

"It's a team effort," she said.

McGee originally hails from Virginia but moved to Florida when he attended the University of Florida and settled in Jacksonville when his father was
